Summit tries to unlock trade talks

The Associated Press

TOKYO Leaders of the industrialized world searched today for a breakthrough to stalled trade negotiations as President Clinton bluntly warned Japan that its huge trade surplus "has fueled resentment" among American workers and businesses.

Just hours before the opening of the annual seven-nation economic summit, Clinton said Japan's persistent trade imbalance "has not just hurt American workers and businesses, it has hurt Japanese people." He said they were paying twice as much as they should for food because of trade restrictions.

Clinton's remarks in a speech to students at Waseda University underscored bitter economic tensions between the United States and Japan. Clinton and Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa said Tuesday they were committed to reaching an agreement to reduce trade friction.

The 19th annual summit of leading industrialized nations - the United States, Canada, Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Japan - was opening amid modest expectations because of the political shakness of the leaders and the weakness of their economies.

Security was tight. Two projectiles were fired at the U.S. military base, Camp Zama, on the outskirts of the city, apparently by radicals opposed to the Group of Seven summit, police said. There were no reports of injuries or damage at the base.

Clinton started his speech at Waseda University on a somewhat comical note, saying he'd forgotten to bring his earphones and thus could not understand what was being said in Japanese about him.

"Perhaps some day an American president will come here and give a speech to you in your native language," he said.

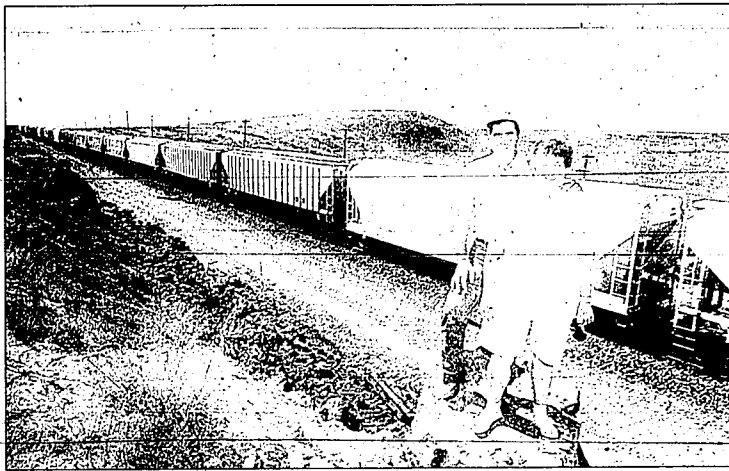

Clinton then went to the heart of U.S. complaints about Japan: its $50 billion trade surplus over the United States.

"This problem has fueled resentment in our country both from workers and businesses," the president said.

In a broader message to all nations, Clinton called for a lowering of trade barriers as a step toward creating jobs.

"Together, we must resist the pressures to put up walls and to protect specific markets and constituencies," he said.

Peninsula dwellers

Terry and Jolene Miller of Blaine County's Yale District, live within a mile of the Union Pacific Railroad's Oregon Short Line route. The railroad, and the tax revenue it provides, are the reason their remote community is part of Blaine County.

Out on a limb

Boundary quirk puts Yale area residents there

By Douglas S. Jones
Mini-Cassia News Service

MINIDOKA A trip to their county courthouse is a two-hour drive through two other counties for Terry and Jolene Miller.

Though they live less than 18 miles from Rupert, a boundary quirk puts the Millers' home in the same county with faraway Hailey, Ketchum and Sun Valley.

The Millers are among three dozen residents of an enclave of irrigated land just east of the city of Minidoka, part of a narrow sliver of Blaine County stretching down Minidoka County's eastern border.

Only eight miles wide for most of its 39-mile length, the so-called "Yale district" is an ungainly peninsula posing logistical challenges for its residents and for county officials.

Terry Miller, a private agriculture researcher and farmer, recently was called to jury duty in Hailey.

His services at a one-day trial proved expensive for the county.

"My check for that day was $10 stipend and $54 for mileage," he said, laughing.

"And that didn't nearly cover the money I spent shopping in Hailey," his wife added.

Fire protection is not a problem, because the area is inside the Minidoka County Fire Prevention District. But summoning law enforcement means calling a sheriff's office 101 miles away.

Migration creates crisis around world

The Associated Press

LONDON — People around the world are migrating in search of better lives on a scale unknown in history, creating a crisis for both industrialized and developing nations, the United Nations Population Fund said Tuesday.

Tensions are growing as the haves and have-nots and different ethnic groups rub shoulders to a greater extent than ever before, it said.

And countries are not doing anything to alleviate the economic disparities which prompt most migration, said Dr. Nafis Sadik, the fund's executive director.

"The potential of this crisis is really explosive," Sadik said.

She added that population growth and a widening economic gap between rich and poor "could result in mass migration."

The fund said people within developing countries are pouring into overcrowded cities in unprecedented numbers, and most of the estimated 100 million international migrants moved from a poor developing country to a richer developing nation.

That includes an estimated 37 million people who have fled violence, drought, environmental destruction and other disasters, it said in its annual State of World Population Report.

The report said most international migration is from one Third World country to another. It did not give an overall figure for migration from developing nations to industrialized nations.

But rural poverty, high fertility and environmental degradation in developing countries drives about 20 million to 30 million of

A survey of international migratory patterns, as taken from the United Nations Population Fund's report:

AMERICAS: Migration patterns are dominated by movement from Mexico to the United States, but Brazil and Venezuela have also been magnets for migrants.

During the 1980s, 7.3 million immigrants entered the United States legally and an unknown number illegally. The total may be as high as 10 million. In the late 1980's, 70 percent of migrants to Canada were from developing countries.

WESTERN EUROPE:

The 12 nations of the European Community absorbed 8 million migrants between 1980 and 1992, half of them from North Africa, Turkey and Yugoslavia. There are increasing numbers from eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union.

majority of them in Africa, Asia and Latin America.

The 1993 global population of $5.7 billion is projected to increase to 6.25 billion in 2010, 8.5 billion in 2025 and 10 billion in 2050, the fund said.

It said the world's four largest "urban agglomerations" in 1990 were Mexico City, with 20.2 million people; Tokyo, 18.1 million; Sao Paulo, Brazil, 17.4 million; and New York, 16.2 million.

MIDDLE EAST:

The oil-producing countries have drawn labor from other Middle Eastern nations and Asia since the 1960s. Most workers come from Egypt, India, Pakistan, South Korea, the Philippines, Bangladesh, Indonesia, Sri Lanka and Thailand.

ASIA:

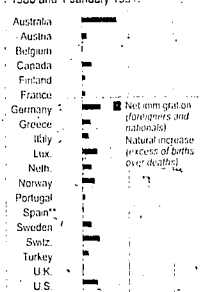

In the last two years, large numbers of Indian migrants have gone to Japan and smaller numbers to South Korea. The Philippines is the region's major supplier of contract labor overseas.

AFRICA:

In West Africa, Ivory Coast is the main destination of cross-border migrants, and Nigeria is also a destination. In southern Africa, the main flow in recent decades has been from Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland to South Africa. In North Africa, most migrants head for western Europe.

No verdict after jury's 18th day

JROISE (AP) — An 18th day of deliberations yielded no verdict Tuesday in the trial of white separatist Randy Weaver and co-defendant Kevin Harris for last summer's murder of a federal marshal.

Expectations that a decision might be near were dashed after jurors asked U.S. District Judge Edward Lewis to declare a mistrial.

The jury resumed deliberations after the court adjourned.

The eight-woman, four-man panel wanted to know whether Harris must be found guilty of resisting arrest, murder and concealing a fugitive for Weaver to be guilty of aiding and abetting those crimes.

During a brief hearing, Judge answered yes and more sharply defined the difference between aiding and abetting and being a "principal" to a crime.

After the hearing, Weaver read the jury's note to Judge and then smiled and handed it to Harris, pointing out the signature of the new juror, Justice John Harris, Weaver, and his year-old House pressman.

The jury resumed deliberations shortly after 7 a.m. Tuesday and retired for the evening at 6 p.m. The panel had put in about 162 hours working toward a verdict through Tuesday.

Weaver's attorney, Gerry Spence, said the deliberations were the longest he had ever seen and had left him "certifiable."

"Anyone who tells you how long this jury is going to deliberate is by definition a fool," he said.

Weaver, 45, and Harris, 25, are charged in the slaying of Deputy U.S. Marshal William Deegan. Harris is charged with shooting Deegan in a confrontation near Weaver's northern Idaho cabin and Weaver is charged with aiding and abetting murder. Both face life imprisonment if convicted.

Weaver and Harris also are charged with conspiring against the government and firearms violations.

Railroad taxes led to shape

By Douglas S. Jones
Mini-Cassia News Service

MINIDOKA — History books say little about how Blaine County leaders managed to hang onto a strip of land stretching all the way to Snake River.

But a map hints at why they wanted it.

Eight miles wide at its north end, the strip widens to 14 miles just before ending at the Snake River, thus taking in the Union Pacific Railroad's Oregon Short Line.

The railroad, and the power lines that followed, made the Yale district worth having, despite the costs of serving the far-flung district.

Blaine County spends an average of $60,000 a year on the area's 36 residents, but it received $116,000 in tax revenue last year, county and state records show.

Union Pacific, with $5.4 million worth of track, is no longer the district's largest taxpayer. Three power lines running across the district give Idaho Power Co. a $6 million tax assessment.

Farm land, houses and telephone lines account for the district's remaining $5.3 taxable value, bringing the total to $16.7 million.

Though life in the Yale district might be more convenient if it were part of Minidoka County, property taxes would be higher. Property-rich Blaine County has one of the lowest property tax rates in the state.

If the Yale district were part of Minidoka County, property taxes for the area would have been at least $255,000 more than double.

Tax rates would more than double too, from $6.90 per $1,000 of taxable value to $14.70.

Yale residents call dispatchers in Hailey, who then must request help from Minidoka County Sheriff Paul Fries. Minidoka County deputies willingly oblige, but their day-to-day presence in the area is rare.

"If we take all the hours we spend there in a year, it's probably about five to seven hours," Fries said.

Ambulances, likewise, are also provided courtesy of Minidoka County. An emergency vehicle dispatched from Hailey would be more than an hour in coming.

"We would die before it would get here," Miller said.

Sixteen students from the Yale District attend Minidoka County schools for which the Blaine County School District paid $9,443 last year.

Blaine County supplies its own bus and driver. Cindy Hruza hauls the students to Aqueena Elementary School, where junior and senior high students then board Minidoka County School District buses for the rest of their commute.

Road maintenance takes careful planning, said Mont Roseberry, who works out of Carey for Blaine County's road department. Once every four years, 11 men take six trucks, a grader and other equipment on a four- or five-day safari to resurface the panhandle's roads.

Winter can be extra challenging: a round trip from Carey can take a snow plow more than 14 hours, Roseberry said.

Jake Hemmer pulls a small boat Tuesday with his wife, Cindy, aboard, along with some of their belongings from their home in Winfield, Mo. A dirt levee gave way near the town, causing residents to seek higher ground.

More rain, damage forecast for flooded Mississippi Valley

ORCHARD FARM, Mo. (AP) — Bob Story takes the same road to town he's driven hundreds of times, only these days he's at the wheel of a motorboat instead of a Ford Escort.

From his pickup, Tom Fairchild is casting lines for catfish weaving past submerged street signs and cabins up their windows in water some three-quarters of a mile inland from the Mississippi River's usual course.

Weeks of heavy rains have pushed the upper Mississippi and its tributaries far out of their normal channels, replacing livestock and crops with fish and silt and flooding hundreds of homes.

The water isn't likely to recede soon. So much water is still rolling down the river toward Missouri that the Mississippi hit record levels Tuesday at some Iowa towns, and kept rising.

All commercial and recreational traffic remained indefinitely tied up on a 436-mile stretch from East Dubuque, Ill., at the southern edge of Wisconsin, to near Lock and Dam No. 26 just north of St. Louis.

Hundreds of National Guardsmen were on duty in Iowa, Illinois and Missouri to help with sandbagging and evacuations.

Story is accustomed to being around water since his home is a houseboat moored at Lake Center Marina near Orchard Farm, so julike many people who live on land he decided to stay put when the river rose.

But since Saturday, he's had to use his motorboat whenever he leaves home.

Early Tuesday, he ferried his wife up Washon Road so she could get to her job as a secretary. He's on vacation from his job with a suburban St. Louis school district.

He has seen snakes swimming by and the carcasses of deer and cattle floating past.

"The only concern that I have is water supply," said Story, as he loaded jugs of water into his boat. The marina's water pumps were shut off because of the high water.

Fairchild, an unemployed construction worker from St. Charles, said "it looked like the fish were moving so I thought I'd come down here one day and try it. I figured they'd be up here in the ditches feeding."

Alongside him, fingers of water from the ever-expanding river reached into soybean fields and spilled out of roadside drainage ditches. Around a big bend in the river, near Perdue, Mo., rising water on Monday broke through a levee four miles from the Mississippi's normal channel.

Some of the worst flooding was in Davenport, Iowa, which has no levees or flood walls.

The Mississippi appeared to have crested there Monday at 22 feet and was down slightly Tuesday. But because of more heavy rain in Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota, it was expected to rise again, cresting even higher Wednesday at 22.4 feet, just short of the record 22.5 feet set in 1965.

Downstream from Davenport, the river hit a record 22.5 feet Tuesday at Burlington, Iowa, and was expected to climb another foot by Friday. It also hit a record 23.8 feet at Keokuk, Iowa, with an additional 2.7 feet expected by Friday.

The flood was expected to have little effect farther downstream in Louisiana, said George Cryer, a forecaster for the National Weather Service in Shreveport, La. The river below St. Louis is broader and deeper, and flood control projects are much larger than those on the upper river, officials said.

Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad on Tuesday called up an additional 80 Iowa National Guard troops for sandbagging, bringing the total in that state to nearly 600. Nearly 500 had been activated in Illinois.

Away from the Mississippi, more torrential rain across Iowa caused flooding on the Des Moines River that forced evacuations at Edysville and Ottumwa, where an entire trailer park was under water, and closed a two-mile stretch of Interstate 48 near Iowa City.

FCC will get money to enforce new cable television regulation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The check is in the mail to federal regulators who said they needed $11.5 million more to enforce the new cable TV law.

Whether consumers see rate refunds any sooner as a result is uncertain.

President Clinton signed the bill late last week appropriating the money the Federal Communications Commission said it needed to hire staff to enforce the law affecting 10,000 cable operations and 57 million subscribers.

When it approved the money, on Friday, Congress said the FCC must start implementing the law immediately and set Sept. 1 as the new date for rate relief to begin.

But the FCC is not sure that is possible.

Just three weeks ago, the commission delayed enforcement start-up from June 21 to Oct. 1, saying it needed more money.

"Now they've got their money," Gene Kimmelman of the Consumer

Federation of America said Tuesday. "And there are all kinds of other problems."

The FCC still has to hire the lawyers, accountants and economists to train them and find office space, said Commissioner Andrew Barnett.

"We have not had a chance to discuss it internally," he said Tuesday of the $11.5 million appropriation. "I want to do the right thing. I want to get it done properly."

FCC Chairman James Quello was traveling Tuesday and unavailable for comment. He told a congressional panel two weeks ago he would put rate regulation "on a fast track" if the money came through.

But he cautioned that the new law would require hiring a lot of new workers.

Currently, cable TV rates across the country are frozen at their September 1992 levels.

Before consumers get reductions mandated by the law, each local franchise authority must file papers with the FCC saying they have a monopoly cable operator in the community. The FCC has 30 days to determine otherwise or certify that the local authority can proceed without enforcement of rate-of-return rules.

Even if the starting bell sounds on Sept. 1, months will pass before consumers feel its effect.

After certification is granted, the local cable franchising authority has 120 days to adopt its rules for enforcing the regulations.

Then it notifies the local cable company which has 30 days to file its new rates based on the FCC's formula.

If there are no questions, the new rates would go into effect in another 30 days.

However, the franchising authority could take another 90 days after the cable company has submitted its new rates to gather more information. It can take an additional 150 days if the local cable company has complained that the FCC's formula does not leave enough money to cover the cost of providing service.

Study: Health insurance may not help poor pregnant women

CHICAGO (AP) — Giving poor pregnant women health insurance might not improve their health and might increase the proportion undergoing Caesarean sections, a study found.

Researchers studied mothers who had babies in Massachusetts hospitals in 1984 and 1987, before and after the state enacted its Healthy Start program in 1985. Healthy Start covers uninsured pregnant women ineligible for Medicaid because their incomes are slightly too high.

The study measured maternal health by looking at three problems: pregnancy-related high blood pressure, premature detachment of the placenta and a mother's hospital stay at least one day longer than her baby's.

The study compared uninsured women and women with private insurance and found that, in 1984, uninsured women had higher complication rates—5.5 percent vs. 5.1 percent—and lower rates of Caesarean sections—17.2 percent vs. 23.0 percent.

In 1987, the study compared Healthy Start mothers and privately insured mothers. Complication rates remained unchanged, but Caesarean rates had risen to 22.4 percent for Healthy Start mothers and 25.9 percent for the privately insured women.

A Caesarean baby is delivered surgeonically through the abdomen.

The researchers, led by Dr. Jennifer S. Haas of Harvard-affiliated Brigham and Women's Hospital, reported their findings in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

The data did not reveal whether the Healthy Start women needed more Caesareans, or whether the higher rate was excessive.

No more than 12 percent of all births should be Caesarean, say some health advocates say. The U.S. rate was 22.7 percent in 1990.

Ms. Haas said Tuesday that Healthy Start needs further study and noted that the program was only a year old in her study.

Sessions cancels trip to French meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director William Sessions, fighting to clear his name of ethics allegations, canceled plans to attend a law enforcement conference in France on Tuesday.

But the decision to pass up the trip to Lyons for a meeting of Interpol, the international police agency, had nothing to do with his embattled status at the bureau, said FBI spokesman John Collingwood.

"It was his own belief that the bureau has several major investigations going on now which I would characterize as international in their ramifications," he said.

"He believed the press of business resulting from those investigations required that he stay here at the bureau."

One of those investigations involves an alleged terrorist plot to bomb sites in New York City that has led to arrests of nine people thus far. Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman, a spiritual leader for many arrested in that case and the Feb. 26 World Trade Center bombing, also was picked up by immigration authorities last Friday for violating his immigration parole status.

Justice officials were not responsible for the change in plans and had no appointments to discuss his future, spokesman Carl Stern said.

Acid rain levels fall in 12 years, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Concentrations of two chemicals linked to acid rain have fallen significantly in a 12-year span, the government said Tuesday in a study focusing on the eastern United States.

The U.S. Geological Survey reported that from 1980 to 1991 sulfate levels were down substantially at 26 of 33 measuring sites and nitrate levels declined significantly at three stations, and were down slightly at 24 others.

Will mission in Macedonia be a 'cost-free' venture?

U.S. to send troops to Macedonia

The U.S. will send 300 troops to aid U.N. peacekeeping forces in Macedonia seeking to keep the Bosnian ethnic conflict from spreading throughout the Balkans.

Macedonia at a glance

- Population: 2.2 million; 67% Macedonian, 20% Albanian, 4% Turkish, 2% Serb, 7% other
- Size: 9,900 sq. mi., slightly larger than Vermont, landlocked
- GDP: $3,110 per capita (1991 estimate)
- Troops: 20,000 lightly armed troops, 10,000 special police

Ethnic discrimination

The 400,000 ethnic Albanians are denied access to local government offices, schools, media and public sector jobs.

International recognition

Independence, declared in 1991, has been disputed by Greece, who claims Macedonia's name implies territorial ambitions on its province of Macedonia, after much haggling, the U.N. admitted the country in April under the temporary name of "Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia."

Risk of war

Some Serb nationalists call Macedonia "Southern Serbia" and could fight on pretext of threats to ethnic Serbs. Albania wants guarantees of rights for ethnic Albanians; Bulgaria has occupied Macedonia three times this century and regards Macedonian Slavs as Bulgarians; a border war would probably pit Serbs and Croats against Turkey, Bulgaria, Macedonia and Albania.

WASHINGTON — A two-in-one mission, to keep peace and to keep the waters of a safe commitment of U.S. force.

President Clinton says the deployment of American troops as peacekeepers in Macedonia "carries minimal risk," hoping to calm fears that Yugoslavia could become a European Vietnam.

The president's decision to have the U.S. Army troops join United Nations peacekeepers in Macedonia gives the United States a greater role in the troubled region. But it avoids the clear danger of military involvement in Bosnia.

A former U.S. commander of NATO recently sketched out a scenario in which U.S. troops could try to keep the peace in Bosnia. Casualties would probably amount to half a dozen American lives a week, he said. Week after week after week.

"Are we willing to contemplate that?" Gen. John Galvin asked the House Armed Services Committee.

The quick, and obvious answer was no.

The question of casualties is one presidents can't avoid. But have, ever grown more concerned about casualties? If so, how will that concern affect U.S. willingness to use its vast military power?

No one is fighting in Macedonia, and the hope is that the presence of U.S. troops in the U.N. force will keep the conflict from spreading to that former Yugoslav republic.

An impoverished, landlocked region with much larger neighbors, Bulgaria, Greece and Serbia — Macedonia was a crucible for the 1912-13 Balkan Wars, as well as a focal point of the struggle for control of southeastern Europe in World Wars I and II.

However, the current debate over using American military power is a legacy of Vietnam, a more distant war fought at an enormous cost in American lives. It was a war that a youthful Bill Clinton opposed and that many of today's political and military leaders are determined never to repeat.

In the immediate aftermath of the swift and relatively painless U.S. military victory in the Persian Gulf, President Bush declared that, at last,

'Electrician's diet poisons him'

COLEMAN, Ohio (AP) — The mystic and an electrician's lead poisoning was solved when he revealed he liked to chew the plastic coating stripped from wires.

"It's just a nervous habit, like chewing gum or something. It's common among electricians," said Elmer Galbraith, 48, who lives near Johnston.

Doctors treated Galbraith with an agent that carries most of the lead out of the body in urine, said Michael Kelley, a medical toxicologist.

A group of U.S. soldiers from Berlin wait for a bus Tuesday at the Skopje, Macedonia, airport. They are part of a 300-member U.S. contingent in the U.N. peace-keeping mission.

America had "kicked the Vietnam syndrome."

Bosnia suggests he was premature. Clinton repeatedly declares that no U.S. ground troops will be sent to Bosnia unless there is a peace agreement first. Secretary of State Warren Christopher describes the Yugoslav conflict as "a quagmire."

Eliot Cohen, a professor of Strategic Studies of Johns Hopkins University, says the United States currently has "a very low tolerance for casualties." He attributes that to "a military that's led by people who were relatively young men in Vietnam, lieutenant colonels, whatever, who were very unhappy with the way parts of that war were conducted."

Cohen directed a Pentagon-sponsored study of the air war in the Persian Gulf. He summed up the Air Force approach to the war with this quote: "No target is worth a plane."

Former Defense Secretary James Schlesinger agrees with Cohen about the concern for casualties and says, "It inhibits us."

In some cases, says Schlesinger, that's not a bad thing. "It may prevent us from doing some foolish things," he said. "It may prevent us from doing some necessary things."

Those who define intervention in Bosnia as a necessary thing express the loudest concerns about administration reluctance to risk casualties.

there?" says Paul Goble, a former State Department official. "I don't think Bosnia matters at all if no one is looking. But the whole world is watching."

"If you think something is important you have to be willing to accept certain losses and you have to prepare the public for that fact," said Mark Lowenthal, a foreign policy analyst at the Library of Congress.

After Iraq occupied Kuwait, Bush succeeded in convincing the American people that U.S. interests were threatened and a military response was necessary. He applied the lesson from Vietnam and created an international coalition under U.N. auspices to avoid the perception that the United States was acting alone.

Lowenthal believes the success of the Persian Gulf War may have as much weight as the failure and frustration of Vietnam in making the nation wary of military risks.

"The public has come to expect that you do these things and they're cost-free," said Lowenthal. "I think there's a concern that there's no longer any acceptance of the kind of casualties that you typically see in warfare."

Nominee shares finances, opinions

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court nominee Ruth Bader Ginsburg and her husband reported net worth of $6.1 million in documents released Tuesday by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

She also gave indications of some of her judicial views, including a statement that Congress should make the hard decisions to pass laws that "equip judges with clearer policy directions."

Ginsburg and her husband, Martin, a tax attorney who teaches law at Georgetown University, listed $2.7 million in securities and investments, $2.1 million in retirement funds and a $1.3 million apartment in Washington's Watergate complex.

Included was the $550,000 value of Martin Ginsburg's law practice.

Federal jury civil cases back in session

WASHINGTON — Federal jury trials resumed Tuesday in civil cases after a two-week halt, thanks to approval of money to pay the jurors.

The money ran out June 18, prompting most federal courts to refuse to start new civil jury trials until Congress appropriated more, said David Sellers of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts.

Money to pay court-appointed lawyers to defend indigent criminal defendants ran out May 27, but the attorneys continued to work in anticipation of being paid.

"During the disruption, more than $7.5 million in payments to court-appointed lawyers got backed up, and an untold number of civil jury trials had to be postponed," Sellers said.

NY court strikes down school district

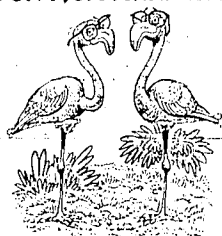

ALBANY, N.Y. — The creation of a special school district for Hasidic Jews was an unconstitutional endorsement of religion by government, New York state's highest court ruled Tuesday. The Court of Appeals, by a 4-2 margin, rejected the Legislature's 1989 solution to the thorny political problem of how to provide school services to the village of Kiryas Joel in Orange County.

Almost all village residents are members of the Satmar Hasidic sect.

The special school district resolved a conflict over providing services to disabled students who were members of the sect.

Surging commodity prices stoke inflation fears

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Climbing gold and commodity prices undermined the bond market and set stocks tumbling Tuesday.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 34.04 to close at 3,419.53 after trading in neutral to modestly higher levels for much of the day. Coupled with Friday's loss, the blue chip indicator has fallen about 60 points in the past two trading sessions.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 4 to 3 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 233.3 million shares as of 4 p.m. up from the pre-holiday weekend amount of 212.68 million on Friday. U.S. financial markets were closed Monday in observance of Independence Day.

In over-the-counter activity, Cragin Financial soared 9 to 35. The holding company of Cragin Federal Bank for Savings has agreed to be bought by ABN AMRO North America Inc., parent of LaSalle National Bank, in a cash deal valued at $38.4 million or more than $500 million.

The Nasdaq composite index fell 2.27 to 702.22. The NYSE composite index declined 2.05 to 245.07 and at the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 1.50 to 433.77.

The stock market began its steep descent after trading narrowly higher from the opening until the early afternoon. The turning point on Wall Street came when bonds reversed themselves and succumbed to inflation worries sparked by surging commodity prices.

The bellwether 30-year Treasury bond lost 1/8 point, lifting its yield to 6.68 percent.

A spurt in gold and silver prices plus a pump in commodity prices, though inflation fears to the fore.

The Commodity Research Bureau's widely watched index of commodity prices rose 5.29 to 217.30 while spot gold shot up $6.81 an ounce to close at $392.30 on the New York Commodity Exchange. Silver for current delivery settled at $5.096 an ounce on New York's Comex.

The inflation worries, which have resurfaced largely on account of heavy rains in key crop growing regions and flooding of the Mississippi River, caught the stock market at a bad time. A spate of dismal economic statistics last week, including a weak employment report on Friday, had set a negative tone.

If Congress calls tune, it should pay piper

Fairness may be the best argument in favor of Sen. Dirk Kempthorne's assault on unfunded federal mandates.

Here sits Congress, backed by the Federal Treasury and the Internal Revenue Service. It can raise billions in taxes. Its credit is unlimited.

And there sit local governments beholden to local voters for almost every dime they spend. Their budgets are restrained by tax caps, vulnerable to citizen-imposed rollbacks and subject to fluctuating local economies.

So when Congress dreams up a brainy idea about better living through bigger government, what does it do?

It gives state and local governments the job. And it lets them figure out how to pay for it.

Fair? Logical? No way.

Local officials from Burley to Chicago are riled about this habit, and with good reason. Lacking the federal government's easy access to taxpayers' wallets, officials sometimes find they must squeeze local services in order to afford Congress' demands.

Kempthorne, R-Idaho, wants to help them, and the bill he proposes is gaining support around the country.

It's a simple idea: If Congress wants to require expensive programs for clean water, juvenile justice and other worthy goals, it should pay for the programs. If not, it shouldn't require them.

Liberals are likely to oppose Kempthorne's bill; they'll see it as a stealth attack to hamper environmental and social legislation.

They may be right, but that doesn't change the basic logic. Congressional mandates cost taxpayers money, at one level or another. Doesn't it make sense to hand the tab to the people who placed the order?

That's called accountability.

Alas, Kempthorne's bill contains an irreparable flaw. Congress can't pass a law to regulate itself. Even if this bill passes, Congress can grant itself an exception anytime it wants.

Only a constitutional amendment could guarantee Kempthorne's goal.

Most likely, the real value of Kempthorne's bill will be the publicity and discussion it generates. Whether it passes or not, it may persuade some members of Congress to be less generous with local tax money.

America needs fair trade

In his response to my letter on the North American Free Trade Agreement, Mr. Denton claims that U.S. jobs being lost in Mexico will be full-time, paying ones. I wish that were true. For years now, dozens of U.S. manufacturers have fled to Mexico, not to escape our minimum-wage scale as Mr. Denton states, but rather our manufacturing wages which are 10 times what they are in Mexico.

Our country isn't just losing jobs to foreign countries; it's losing entire industries. There's only one company left in the United States that makes TVs; one motorcycle company, one phone manufacturer, one maker of American flags. We've invented the FAX and the video cassette recorder, but no American company makes them here.

I agree with Mr. Denton when he says it hurts both sides when governments pressure trade. It's about transferring wealth. Mexico is spending $50 million lobbying Congress to push NAFTA through in order to repay the billions it owes the United States if the form of cheap labor, U.S. banks with big profits, lucrative investment services for clients there. Less visible winners will be Asian and European manufacturers that will use Mexican labor to produce goods that they can sell in the U.S. market.

Mr. Denton doesn't believe NAFTA is a threat to our nation's sovereignty. NAFTA allows Mexico and Canada to seriously challenge our environmental, health and safety laws where they infringe on their trade opportunities. Frankly, I'm glad a judge ruled that an environmental impact study be done before NAFTA goes any further. I wonder why the impact to workers, farmers and communities isn't being studied too.

Like the lobbyists in Washington, Mr. Denton says, "NAFTA will make America wealthier." The question is, for whom? How does closing American factories to move south do that? How much wealthier will Americans be when dozens of more factories flee south as soon as NAFTA is signed? NAFTA will not make us stronger in the long run. Instead, NAFTA is a run for the border, stopping only for the cheapest labor and loosest laws. America doesn't need free trade. Mr. Denton, it needs fair trade.

Paper takes anti-education slant

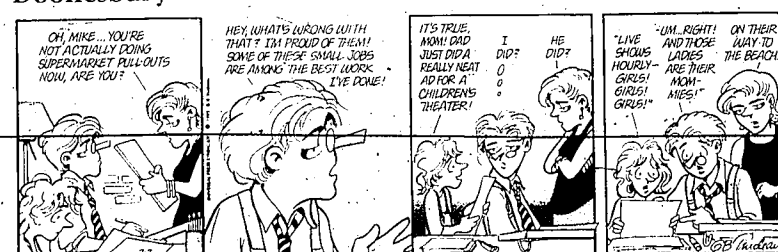

Here is a new meaning for the term "triple dip." It means three Times-News writers (including their editor) pontificating on issues they know very little about as they attempt to write yet another anti-education article which ends with a complete seance.

Buy that winning ticket

The nation's lottery hucksters normally are shameless about hyping their program for separating fools from money. So don't you think it's odd that they sprouted consciences as soon as the Powerball jackpot topped $100 million?

On Tuesday, lottery officials started warning lottery players not to buy too many tickets.

Hmmm.

We've never been big supporters of lotteries, or any other publicly sponsored gambling venture. But we have to admit, the Idaho Lottery does provide some nice revenue for school construction.

So why not make the most of a good thing? Buy, folks, buy! Buy 100, 200, 500 tickets!

So what if you squander the rent money? Who cares? You'll be moving to Bermuda anyway, just as soon as you win the big one!

Yeah. Play that numbers game. The school children will thank you.

(And hey, it's a better return than we usually get on our tax money.)

NAFTA will take away rights

To President Clinton:

If enacted, the North American Free Trade Agreement will take away our right to enact our own laws through our elected representatives as provided in Article I, Section 8 of the Constitution. To regulate commerce with foreign nations, NAFTA provides the regulation shall be entrusted to a secretariat composed of unelected persons chosen by the heads of state.

If enacted, NAFTA will deprive us of our First Amendment right "to petition the government for redress of grievances." NAFTA presumes to have all disputes over foreign commerce decided by tribunals of the secretariat's choosing. No appeal by the people is allowed for.

If enacted, NAFTA will provide very specific tax exemptions for foreign and domestic corporations that would be tax evasion under present law.

If enacted, NAFTA will give authority over environmental issues to the secretariat. Congress does not have the option to modify NAFTA. NAFTA will become the law of the land on Jan. 2, 1994, unless this Congress refuses to be "fast-tracked." NAFTA has already been negotiated and signed by President Bush according to authority given by a Nixon-era Congress. The present Congress can only accept or reject the package, called implementing legislation, that will "harmonize" all our laws with NAFTA. Citizens of Blaine County are prepared to debate the good and the bad effects NAFTA will have on our lives, our living and our constitutional freedoms in Haley on the evening of July 23.

You are expressly invited to be present. A chair has been reserved with your name on it. We will gladly give you time to expound your point of view. Please advise us of your intentions at P.O. Box 705, Pinedale, ID 83448.

Bombing ruins U.S.'s image

President Clinton's bombing of Iraq was a sorry performance that reflects great discredit on President Clinton and seriously damages both the reputation of the United States and the cause of world peace.

From what I have read, it has not been established that the car bomb in Kuwait was sponsored by the government of Iraq or even that it was intended to assassinate ex-President Bush. In any case, the terrorist plot was thwarted by Kuwaiti police, and Bush was not harmed.

After our attack on Iraq, President Clinton addressed the nation with these words: "The Iraqi attack against President Bush was an attack against our country and against all Americans." Which was an outright lie, the kind of lie that we used to associate with Hitler's regime. The idea that Iraq would attack the United States is ridiculous on its face. Saddam Hussein may be vicious and ruthless, but he is certainly not dumb enough to attack the United States.

Nonetheless, our government went before the United Nations and tried to justify our attack on Iraq on the grounds that the United States was defending itself against a tiny little Iraq. We tried to use the United Nations Charter to justify an action that was essentially state terrorism, American style.

I have several arguments against taking actions like our missile strike against Iraq. The first argument is moral. Bombing Iraq was wrong. Dropping bombs on one's neighbor is the very antithesis of loving one's neighbor.

My second argument is more practical. When we drop bombs on other human beings, we engender hatred for America. We have already engendered enough hatred that Americans traveling abroad are well-advised to conceal their identities as Americans.

My third argument is that missile strikes like ours against Iraq can strengthen our adversaries. When we kill or maim a few dozen Iraqis, men, women and children, we are not hurting Saddam, we are strengthening him.

So long as U.S. presidents know that military attacks on Third World countries make for popularity in opinion polls, we are likely to have more military strikes against the weak and defenseless.

Act against Medicare cuts

Bill Clinton promised us he would not touch Social Security. Both parties solicited our votes with promises for better health care and a more secure financial future. In response, seniors gave President Clinton 50 percent of their vote in a three-man race.

The president now wants to increase Medicare premiums and make additional cuts in Medicare funding. Your retirement security may be in the balance. For many seniors, any cut in Social Security or Medicare means the difference between enjoying their retirement and struggling to get by. For others, it means not having enough money for decent food, shelter or clothing. Once again, seniors are being used as the scapegoats for the nation's economic troubles.

We all know that Social Security and Medicare benefits can be hauled or capped unless seniors speak out loud and clear. Rather than cut wasteful spending programs, the president and Congress leaders want to raise taxes on millions of Social Security dependents and increase Medicare premiums and cut funds for Medicare by $52.6 billion over the next five years.

Medicare already pays doctors and hospitals only 70 percent of what they receive from private payers. These deductions could jeopardize seniors receiving quality health care. It's time to take a hard look at government spending and the causes of the budget deficit.

ODDM-not worth the money

To District #41 School Board Members: In case you didn't get the message in the recent levy defeat, p-r-i-o-r-i-t-y-z-e your expenditures and you will have enough money to run our schools. We have enough to pay for textbooks, fair salaries for teachers and crosswalk guards. What you are attempting to fund with the latest levy is the Outcomes Driven Developmental Model educational system.

This is an experimental system with a track record of failure. The exact figures for what this will cost us have been withheld from the public, so we really do not know what the bottom line is. I have read that the actual cost is in the millions.

I have never before voted against a school levy, but the truth is, you cannot afford the basics because you've spent too much on ODDM.

Police keep tight reins on downtown

COEUR D'ALENE — Teen-agers hanging out along Coeur d'Alene's Shannan Avenue this summer are upset over being cited for such relatively small offenses as jaywalking and standing in the street.

Police along Coeur d'Alene's main thoroughfare are strictly enforcing a new city policy allowing no slack for curfew violations, noisy car stereos or smoking minors.

Teens say they are being unfairly pushed out to make downtown more appealing for tourists.

"They want to keep us home. They believe that children should be seen but not heard, but they don't even want us seen," 18-year-old Laura Witham complained.

Even some downtown shop owners say the police are going to far. One said she fears officers will make teens' parents angry enough to stop shopping downtown.

Judge wants transcript made public

IDAHO FALLS — After an unusual hearing conducted by the chief justice of the Idaho Supreme Court, Charles McDevitt, the transcript of a closed hearing on a health department warning will be made public.

McDevitt ruled last week that the transcript of an earlier court hearing will be made public, defining an Idaho court rule setting standards for when court documents are open to the public.

The rule says the public has a right to examine records of all court proceedings, with exceptions. The exceptions include "those whose disclosure might endanger or lead to the harassment, embarrassment or humiliation of innocents."

The ruling brings to a close several months of legal efforts by the Post Register to get access to the information, and better defines what court documents and decisions are open.

Commission approves contract change

BOISE — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission has approved a change in a contract involving a controversial eastern Idaho hydroelectric project, but says it won't get into the debate over its environmental impact.

The $20 million Falls River hydro project is being developed near Ashton by a subsidiary of Idaho Power Co. It's to have a maximum generating capacity of 9.1 megawatts and produce 52 million kilowatt-hours per year.

The PUC said Tuesday it has approved a change in the contract between Idaho Power and Marysville Hydro Partners. Marysville Hydro Partners is a partnership between Falls River Hydro Co. and Environmental Energy Co. Falls River Hydro is a subsidiary of Idaho West Energy Co., a subsidiary of Idaho Power.

In June, 1992, an irrigation canal which channels water to the generating plant washed out, dumping thousands of tons of sediment into Falls River. It's a tributary to an important trout stream, the Henry's Fork of the Snake River.

Former principal suing school district

SANDPOINT — A former principal at Sandpoint's Southside Elementary School has filed a $500,000 tort claim against the Bonner County School District.

Steve Johnson contends he was fired without cause or adequate due process. His wife, Marguerite Johnson, also is seeking $10,000 for loss of consortium and emotional distress.

Johnson was suspended with pay March 5 and fired in mid-May for unprofessional conduct and violating district policy after criticizing school board and district actions.

"It's a case of sour grapes," school district attorney Charles Dodson said, dismissing the claim required before a lawsuit can be filed.

Garden City man's condition improves

BOISE — A Garden City man police say killed his wife, the daughter of an Ada County Commissioner, and then turned the gun on himself remains in critical but improving condition, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Police said Johnny Lee Darby, 39, shot himself in the head in an apparent suicide attempt after he fatally shot his wife Vikki Lynne Darby, 26, at his trailer Saturday morning.

Vikki Darby was the daughter of Commissioner Vern Bisterfeldt. The couple was separated and she was living with the Bisterfeldts.

Darby was improving Monday night at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center.

Associations work to keep city liveable

BOISE — As Boise grows in the wake of a strong economy, many citizens envision it as a collection of small, supportive neighborhoods instead of a large, unfriendly metropolis.

A rising population has many residents fearing it will bring unwanted baggage in high crime, heavy traffic and violent schools. But some are fighting back by forming neighborhood associations to head off problems before they start.

"With the growth in Boise and Ada County, people are seeing that they have to band together to keep their neighborhoods viable places to live," said Renee Quick, a 13-year member of the East End Neighborhood Association.

Those associations are multiplying and they are flexing their strength in plans affecting the environment, recreation, parking and development.

Reward for missing girl reaches $35,000

POCATELLO (AP) — Despite a reward fund that has climbed to $35,000, Pocatello police said Tuesday they have no solid leads into the abduction of Idaho State Journal carrier Jeralee Underwood last week.

The girl, 11, was snatched off a Pocatello street last Tuesday. An eyewitness said a man in his mid-30s forced her into a car and sped away.

There's been no sign of her since, of offenders, but we do not have a particular suspect.

time included 1,500 volunteers. "We are getting about 100 tips a day," said Det. Scott Shaw.

"We have some strong leads, but that is as far as we will go. We are looking at a number of officers, but he had no information on when the show might be broadcast.

The case is progressing. We are not at a standstill. Of course, we are frustrated because we have not gotten Jeralee back. But we are by no means at a dead end in our investigation.

A crew from the "America's Most Wanted" television show was at the police department Tuesday, said Detective Capt. Lynn Harris.

He said they planned to interview officers but he had no information on when the show might be broadcast.

Shaw said they have received numerous reports of attempted abductions from other parts of Idaho and across the country.

A man in a light-colored car reportedly tried to snatch an Armon girl during the weekend. Shaw said he was aware of the incident, but did not feel there was a connection.

"We have gotten several of those types of reports," Shaw said.

"We do not feel that any of them are closely associated with our case."

Salmonella, E. Coli draw attention of Idaho eateries

BOISE (AP) — An outbreak of salmonella at a Nampa restaurant on the heels of the deaths from E. Coli bacteria in the region has Idaho eating establishments taking notice.

Most of the people — 202 at last count — who reported food poisoning after eating at Maria's Hacienda restaurant in Nampa are feeling better.

But the outbreak of salmonella poisoning, which hospitalized a half-dozen people, will have lingering effects.

"I'm sorry, Maria's had this problem," said Marilyn Swanson, food-safety specialist for the University of Idaho. "But as a result of this problem, I would guarantee you the other restaurants in this area will step up their food-safety practices."

So far, 48 cases of salmonella have been confirmed through tests. All ate at the restaurant between June 19 and June 23.

The incidence of salmonella poisoning is rising in the United States, Swanson said.

Unrest sparks martial law in Georgia

TEHRAN—Georgia's Georgian leader, Eduard Shevardnadze declared martial law Tuesday in the war-torn region of Abkhazia as separatist Abkhazian troops marched toward the regional capital, Sukhumi.

The announcement that Shevardnadze was taking control followed news that Abkhazian troops had recaptured the only road linking Sukhumi to the rest of Georgia and opened a new front south of the seaside city of 130,000 people.

A United Nations envoy, Lt. Col. Per-Erik Korstrom of Sweden, said as many as 1,000 Georgian soldiers and civilians had been killed in the Abkhazian offensive, which began last week.

Serbs, Croats snub U.N. commander

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian Serb and Croat military chiefs snubbed the new U.N. peacekeeping commander Tuesday by failing to show up for talks on Sarajevo's status as a "safe area" for Muslims.

Only Ratko Delic, the head of the Muslim-led government's army, came for talks on demilitarizing Sarajevo and protecting the city and five other Muslim enclaves that the United Nations has designated as "safe areas."

The meeting at Sarajevo airport also was intended to introduce the top generals of Bosnia's three warring ethnic factions to Gen. Jean Cot of France, the new commander of U.N. forces in former Yugoslavia.

In recent days, Serbs have choked off U.N. shipments of vital fuel to Sarajevo. Croat and Serb forces also have blocked and convoys elsewhere despite promises to let them pass. In some cases, Serbs have demanded exorbitant road tolls or confiscated convoy cargoes at gunpoint.

Hurricane Calvin closes in on Mexico

ACAPULCO, Mexico — Rain and winds lashed this Pacific Coast resort Tuesday as Hurricane Calvin moved close to Mexico.

Flooding left thousands homeless and Acapulco's airport and ports were closed, authorities said.

High winds and rains began pummeling Acapulco around 5 a.m. MDT as the storm began moving north-northwest toward this resort, said Alejandro Adame, a spokesman for Guerrero state.

Winds of 62 mph with gusts of up to 68 mph uprooted at least 100 trees and damaged some local highways, but there were no immediate reports of injuries or major damage to buildings, Adame said.

Winds at sea were reported at 80 mph. A storm with sustained winds above 74 mph qualifies as a hurricane.

Museum pays record for Michelangelo

LONDON — The Getty Museum paid a record $6.3 million Tuesday for a Michelangelo drawing not seen in public for 157 years, Christie's auction house said.

The price was an all-time high for a drawing by an Old Master. The chalk and ink work called "Holy Family with the Infant Baptist on the Rest on the Flight into Egypt," was sold to the Malibu, Calif., museum by a private collector whose name was not divulged.

South African fighting kills dozens

CAPETOWN, South Africa — An ambush of political fighting in two black townships killed dozens of people Tuesday, a grim reminder of how difficult it will be for South Africa to hold democratic elections.

After overnight battles, police said at least 45 people had been killed in Tokozwa and Kaitlhone, two impoverished townships southeast of Johannesburg.

Nationwide, more than 125 blacks have died since Friday, when black and white negotiators set April 27, 1994, as the date for South Africa's first elections, including the black majority.

Most of the township fighting involved supporters of the African National Congress and the Zulu-dominated Inkatha Freedom Party, the nation's two leading black groups and bitter rivals for power.

Man can enter pageant, but can't win

SYDNEY, Australia — The organizers of a national beauty pageant said Tuesday men can enter the contest but won't be allowed to win. Miss Australia contest officials changed the rules after a man, Damien Taylor, 24, won a local contest last month and applied to enter the national pageant.

Organizers of the contest in Taylor's hometown of Tweed Heads, 300 miles north of Sydney, welcomed his entry and even changed the event's name from the Miss Winterson Quest to the Winterson Quest.

But the Spastic Center, which has run the Miss Australia Quest for 40 years to raise funds for its work with disabled people, was less accommodating.

"There will be no male entrants awarded the title of ... Miss Australia," the center said in a statement.

U.N. troops comb Mogadishu for weapons

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP)

In the highest house-to-house weapons search for several weeks, 500 U.N. troops combed homes and shanties in southern Mogadishu on Tuesday in hopes of flushing out followers of fugitive warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid.

Infantry from the U.S. Quick Reaction Force met no armed resistance, but seized 12 rifles and a machine gun, said Maj. Leann Swickowski, spokesperson for U.S. forces in Somalia.

Two Somalis suspected of running a small command center for gunmen loyal to Aidid were detained.

The operation, backed by reconnaissance and strike helicopters circling overhead, appeared to signal the United Nations' determination to resume aggressive disarmament tactics, which were halted by a series of costly battles that began June 5 when 24 Pakistani peacekeepers were slain.

Officers in the 29-nation U.N. force have said in the next few days they want to regain control of the streets in southern Mogadishu.

Tuesday's searches covered an area of about two square miles scattered with tall, shabby shacks and adjacent to a military airport used by the 194,000-strong U.N. coalition.

Military officials say gunmen recently have fired on U.N. troops from hiding places amid refugee shanties.

On Saturday, at least three refugees were killed in cross-fire when an apparent clash between rival Somali gunmen spilled over to ward Pakistani peacekeepers defending the airport, who returned fire.

In another step to regain control, Italian peacekeepers on Tuesday returned to abandoned positions along the so-called Green Line dividing southern Mogadishu from the northern portion of the city controlled by rival warlord Ali Mahdi Mohamed.

The Italians withdrew after three of their soldiers died in a well-orchestrated ambush by Somali gunmen during a search Friday for suspected Aidid arms caches near a derelict pasta factory on the boundary line.

Italian foot patrols on Tuesday distributed 30,000 leaflets in the Somali language appealing for calm in their sector of the city.

To defuse possible fears of revenge shootings, the leaflets said the Italians did not wish to pursue a vendetta against their attackers.

"We have only pain in our souls for the Italian and Somali brothers dead or wounded," the leaflets said.

District judge could drop murder charge

TWIN FALLS — A district judge will consider an attorney's request that premeditated murder be dropped from the charge against Leo D. Jasper of Twin Falls.

Jasper, 22, is charged with first-degree murder in the April 20 stabbing death of 42-year-old Thomas Pont. Prosecutors have charged that the killing was premeditated and done during the commission of a robbery.

Either theory is enough for a first-degree murder charge. Twin Falls County Public Defender Mike Wood has asked 5th District Judge Daniel Mechl to dismiss the portion of the charge that deals with premeditation.

The evidence shows Pont was killed after "a totally chance meeting on the streets of Twin Falls late at night," Wood said in court.

Mechl said Tuesday he will take the matter under advisement until he can read a transcript of Jasper's preliminary hearing.

Jasper remains in Twin Falls County jail.

2 men face misdemeanor charges after fight in jail

TWIN FALLS — Two men face misdemeanor charges for their part in a fight in the Twin Falls County jail Sunday.

Wesley Goff, 22, of Lodi, Calif., is charged with battery, and Brad R. Howers, 20, faces an assault charge after a third inmate said he was beaten in his cell.

Rigoberto Almanza, who is in jail for a drunken driving conviction, said he got into a fight with Goff over whether he could remain in the cell, and that Howers held the door while the fight was going on, according to a statement by Cpl. John C. Hopper of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department.

Goff is in jail serving time for drug trafficking, while Howers is serving a probation violation stemming from a burglary conviction.

Husband, wife charge one another with battery

TWIN FALLS — An out-of-town couple got a first-hand look at the Twin Falls County jail on July 4 after charging one another with battery.

Leshie Kappan, 44, of Downey was first spotted by an off-duty police officer who said she nearly drove her car into him.

Kappan was arrested and charged with drunken driving. She told police her husband had beaten her, so officers went to their motel room and found Terry Hansen.

Hansen said Kappan had started the fight, and both signed misdemeanor battery citations against one another, and both went to jail.

Hansen was released after posting $300 bond, but Kappan soon found herself in even more trouble. A correctional officer at the jail said Kappan tried to hit her during the booking-in procedure.

Kappan was then charged with assault on a correctional officer, a felony, and is being held in lieu of $1,000 bond.

Feds to release information on spent reactor fuel at INEL

TWIN FALLS — Federal Energy Department officials said Tuesday they will "fully include" activities related to spent U.S. Navy reactor fuel in an environmental impact statement on operations at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Late last month a federal judge halted all shipments of highly radioactive spent reactor fuel until INEL could complete a site-wide impact statement. The statement already is under way.

The Navy has sent all its spent fuel to INEL since 1957.

The Navy is working closely with the Energy Department to fully include the Naval Reactor Facility operations into the court ordered environmental impact statement, Adm. Bruce DeMars said.

The statement will include alternatives to shipping spent fuel to INEL, to be examined, he said.

Federal officials said are studying the court's ruling and its legal options.

But a Tuesday news release from INEL said "the Department will fully include in the (statement) the activities related to spent fuel generated by the U.S. Naval Nuclear Propulsion Program."

No fatal accidents, serious injuries reported over weekend

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Local law enforcement officers expected the usual busy Independence Day weekend, but cool weather seems to have kept problems to a minimum.

There were no fatal accidents, and the Idaho State Police reported no major wrecks involving serious injuries in the area, ISP dispatcher Sharron Bracke said.

Traffic was heavy at times, and plenty of speeding citations were issued by the two teams on duty for every shift over the weekend, Bracke said.

"It stayed fairly quiet," said Lt. Dan Hall, who oversees the patrol division at the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department. His deputies handed out lots of traffic citations, and that, along with the weather, may have suppressed the number of accidents, he said.

Cool weather kept boaters out of the water, too. The county's marine patrol reported a smaller-than-usual number of craft plying the area waterways over the weekend.

Firefighters responded to several minor fire calls, but no major house fires were sparked by fireworks. The city police department was inundated with calls, especially from residents complaining of fireworks and loud parties.

But for the most part, the holiday passed without trauma or tragedy.

Local police took a number of calls from people who said they may have spotted the man who abducted an 11-year-old Pocatello girl last week, but none of the leads panned out.

The reward for information leading to the return of Jarilee Underwood, last seen collecting from customers on her newspaper route June 30, has reached $35,000, according to the The Associated Press.

Methodist women some day will stop cooking for Kiwanians

By Mychel Mathewy Goodman
Times-News correspondent

FILER — At restaurants across the country, Kiwanians conduct their business between mouthfuls of meat and potatoes.

But not in Filer. No restaurant food here, thank you.

The Filer Kiwanis Club, a community service organization, meets each Tuesday to enjoy home cooked food and do a little business at the Methodist Church in Filer.

Once a week, for 69 years — since the inception of the Filer Kiwanis Club — the United Methodist Women have cooked up and served Kiwanians fresh vegetables, meats and homemade pies just like Grandma.

But with the aging of some of the Methodist women, some now fear that may all come to an end.

In 1924, Lillian Dougherty's grandmother cooked for the club on a coal range in the basement of the church. Dougherty started assisting her grandmother 15 years later, and after 50-some years, she is still cooking.

Although the stove has changed, the menus have not.

"No casseroles," she said. "The men don't want casseroles."

Much of the menu is donated by church members and women in the group. Proceeds from the weekly luncheons — at $4 per plate — help finance the church, or is given to charity.

The arrangement benefits both the United Methodist Women and the Kiwanians.

"I know we have been the great envy of other Kiwanis Clubs, because of the Methodist ladies," Kiwanis President Bob Fort said.

Dougherty heads just one of the four teams that cook for the club every week. Each team cooks an average of 45 meals once a month, she said.

"We used to have more women, so we didn't have to cook as often," Dougherty said. Now less women have time for such a commitment.

Many of the women are now of retirement age.

Dougherty, 81, says she hasn't given retirement much thought, though. She's still too busy with the Filer Senior's Center and the Twin Falls County Fair, where she is the kitchen and pantry department superintendent.

Filer Kiwanians hate to think about what they would do without the women. There is no restaurant in Filer that could accommodate such a large group.

"We do share their concern, because their numbers are dwindling, and their ages are increasing," Fort said. "But we don't have a Plan B."

"We're aware that many good things come to an end," he added. "But we're hoping this good thing doesn't end. We do cherish these ladies."

Intersection speed limit to be lower

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Except for 600 feet on both sides of the intersection with Madison Street, the speed limit on Falls Avenue once again is 35 mph.

After an energetic discussion Tuesday night, the City Council reversed a vote of two weeks earlier that had lowered it from 35 to 25 mph. The lower limit never was posted.

Mayor Howard Allen, Councilwoman Mary McClusky and Councilmen Gale Kleinlopp and Jim Vickers voted to raise the speed limit back to 35 mph.

Councilwoman Pam Dowd and Councilman Art Frantz voted against raising the speed limit. Dowd and Frantz joined by McClusky and Councilman Tom Condie, had voted to lower it two weeks ago.

Condie was absent from Tuesday night's vote.

Tuesday night, Dowd said city residents need to drive slower. City police officers often don't ticket speeders in a 35-mph zone, until they are in a 40-mph zone.

"I want the council to work toward a permanent solution," Dowd said.

But the council enacted a couple of other measures Tuesday night that will lower the speed limit at the Falls-Madison intersection.

The council voted to put in changeable speed-zone signs, with flashing beacons, 600 feet on both sides of the intersection. These signs would lower the speed limit to 25 mph within 600 feet of the intersection.

Frantz and Dowd insisted that the 25 mph limit be in place year-round to protect children.

In addition, the city will install warning signs that school crossing guards can switch on when children are crossing the intersection.

It will cost about $9,000 to put in the signs, according to estimates of city 1 member Gary Young.

Mayor resigns because of residential rule

By Stephen Schowengerdt
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Mayor Dan Hamilton resigned Sunday, citing family commitments that "no longer make it feasible to have a permanent residence in the city of Ketchum."

Hamilton, who married Sherry Rath earlier this spring, has been dividing his time between his Ketchum residence and the home of his wife in Helen Meadows, which is outside the city limits. Ketchum city officials are required to live in the city.

In his letter of resignation, dated July 4, Hamilton thanked the City Council members for "their wisdom and ability to accomplish so much in a such a short time."

He also thanked city administration for its quiet for his professionalism and invaluable assistance and the city staff for "keeping the city running so efficiently amidst such political turmoil."

His resignation leaves the City Council with a single member, Guy Coles, who was elected to office and three members who were appointed to their council seats following a recall vote last November.

The immediate question of what to do about a mayor for Ketchum will be addressed at a special City Council meeting today at noon at City Hall.

The meeting was scheduled prior to Hamilton's resignation to deal with other city business.

Hamilton's resignation came as a surprise to the council.

"I know about as much as you do," said Councilman Chip Fisher Tuesday.

"It sounds like he's leaving the country," he added, referring to unconfirmed reports that the Hamiltons are moving to Venezuela.

"It's implied that he might do that," said council President Guy Coles of Hamilton's resignation. "I'm surprised at the way he did it."

"We'll solve this tomorrow at noon," said Fisher. "We aren't going to leave the town Please see MAYOR/B2

Don't bet farm on $100 million lottery

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — With the Powerball lottery jackpot hitting $100 million and ticket sales booming across the state, the Idaho Lottery issued an unusual warning Tuesday: Don't bet the farm.

Lottery Director Wally Hedrick, following the lead of several states in the multi-state Powerball lottery, urged Idahoans to "play wisely" when lining up for tickets.

"We do not worry about our regular players, for they have consistently used their discretionary income to play Idaho Lottery games," Hedrick said in a statement. "But the experiences in other states have shown us that people who have never played before become involved in jackpots of this size and may not have the experiences necessary to help them make the right decision."

So far, he said, there's been no evidence of people spending their life savings on Powerball tickets. Nonetheless, the Lottery will place television and newspaper ads with the "play wisely" message "kind of as a safeguard."

"With all of our promotion and hype, we have a certain amount of responsibility," Hedrick said.

The $100 million jackpot is the fourth-largest in U.S. lottery history. The previous record jackpot for Powerball, $59 million, was won in March by players in Missouri and Indiana.

By 2 p.m. Tuesday, Idaho Lottery officials said, $417,000 in Powerball tickets had been sold in the state. Three hours later, that figure had grown to $545,000.

Tickets were selling at the rate of 350 to 360 a minute. At that rate, Hedrick predicted, $1.5 million in tickets will be bought in Idaho before tonight's drawing.

That will translate into $100,000 in dividends for public schools and state building projects, he said.

Other Idaho Lottery games, including the Fantastic Five drawing and instant tickets, were also showing a marked increase in sales, Hedrick said.

Lottery officials improvised on their electronic billboards, including one at the intersection of Washington Street and Addison Avenue in Twin Falls, in order to display the $100 million Powerball jackpot. The electronic display can only go as high as $99 million.

However, the odds that someone will pick the winning combination improve the more tickets are bought. Ron Williams, on-line games coordinator for the Idaho Lottery, said that based on ticket sales across the country, there's a two in three chance that someone, somewhere will pick the winning combination.

If that person is the only winner, he or she will receive a check for

Boy escapes from detention center

By Brad Bowlin

THEIR 17-year-old Nevada boy escaped last week with a pair of sneakers and a shirt. Mace, a store employee has escaped from Twin Falls County Correctional Center in Idaho.

The boy was caught by city police Thursday while hiding beneath the canyon rim after leaving the Magic Valley Mall with a pair of tennis shoes.

Monday morning, shortly after 1 a.m., the boy slipped out of the Flowery and Produce Building at the county fairgrounds in Elmer. He had said not to be found Tuesday evening.

The display building has been used as a temporary holding area for juveniles for two years. An $800,000 bond issue election to pay for a new regional detention center is scheduled for July 20.

The detention center's unit manager, L. James Jones, said Tuesday that the escape points out the inadequacies of the center's facility.

"We don't have a secure building," he said.

The building's two doors are equipped with buzzers that go off when the doors are opened, but the doors are not locked because of fire regulations.

Before escaping, the boy apparently used a pair of fingernail clippers to cut the buzzer wires, Jones said.

The rest room, she said.

A staff member heard the door close behind the boy, but by the time he got outside, the boy was sealing the fence that encloses the narrow outdoor recreation area and disappeared into the dark, Jones said.

The boy, who inched a hole to Twin Falls after leaving his home in Reno, has a lot of family problems, she said. He was found and determined to leave because he did not want to go home, she said.

The faced charges of aggravated assault and petty theft. Jones said she does not believe he is dangerous.

The escape is the first since the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare took over the detention center more than a year ago. Jones said 185 boys have come through the facility since then and none have escaped.

City honors men for keeping streets clean

By H.R. Weissel

Times News correspondent

JEROME. Two Jerome residents were honored recently for their diligence in cleaning up the town.

City officials erected monuments at a ceremony on the Courthouse lawn last week in memory of the late Marie Dufry and Verle Sullivan, former businesswomen, who both died last week.

Sullivan spent years picking up garbage. The city finally presented him with a trash can on wheels to assist in his search for trash.

Dufry planted flowers and trees and promoted beautification projects throughout Jerome.

These men were well known for their ambition to keep our streets clean," said Councilman Mary Childers. "Our merchants are challenged to get out and pull weeds from cracks in the sidewalks like Marie and Verle did."

Mid Swenson and Lynn Bingham were guest speakers at the event.

Waves of the two men, Elaine Dufry and Verle Sullivan, were presented with red roses.

Two engraved marble benches were placed on the courthouse lawn in their memory.

The monuments were donated by community people and Ed Robertson, from the Hove-Ed Robertson Chapel, Moss Greenhouse provided flowers to be planted as a backdrop to the benches. Triple C Concrete Co. donated the cement for the area around the monuments.

State officials offer irrigation water, energy efficiency workshop

JEROME. State officials will present a one-day irrigation water and energy efficiency workshop Thursday.

The free workshop will begin at 9:30 a.m. at the Alvin Chomay farm north of Jerome. Officials from the State Department of Water Resources Energy Division will demonstrate energy efficiency and water management.

For exact location and information, call the Idaho Energy Hotline 1-800-454-SAVE, the county extension office or Soil Conservation Service.

Couple refuses to pay $1 million bill for fire suppression

The Associated Press

A Pennsylvania couple say they were not to blame for a forest fire they caused on the Payette River last July, and refuse to pay the $1 million bill the state is charging for fire suppression.

Fredrick and Jeanne Howard of Lake Ariel, Pa., were featured on NBC's "Dateline" program on Tuesday night. The Howards were towing a 1981 Civic car behind their motorcycle last July in the middle of a long drought. "A friend mentioned the way on Route 144 (Highway) 55 was especially pretty," Jeanne Howard said. It was hot and the Howards had the windows rolled up and air conditioner on.

A witness behind the retired couple said Fred Howard took a corner too tight in the narrow river canyon. A right rear fire on the Honda blew, causing sparks to hit the bare wheel scraped along.

The Howards said they did not see any flames or smoke, and did not take notice of people trying to alert them. They finally stopped, unhooked the Honda and watched it burn.

After driving 2,000 miles on their vacation trip, "I guess I was a little hindered to blinking lights," he said. He finally noticed a "ball of flame, like a Roman candle" and stopped.

The small fires caused along the road shoulder finally burned 6,700 acres of private, state and federal lands.

Before the vote to lower the limit, Young had told council members that enforcing the 25 mph speed would be almost impossible. Allen and Vickers voted against the lower speed limit, in part, for that reason, and because it did not address the safety issue, they said.

Residents complained to several council members after the limit was lowered, but Dowd said no one complained to her.

Tuesday night's action followed months of debate after a school crossing guard complained to the council about cars speeding along Falls and endangering children walking to school.

A traffic study showed that the Falls-Madrona intersection did not merit a signal, so Young suggested some alternatives, including the change to a speed zone and warning signs that the council adopted Tuesday night.

Dowd said she originally suggested the lower speed limit because the council needed to take some action and no other choices had been discussed. McCluskey said that's why she voted for the lower limit.

"Two weeks ago there was no other choice," she said. "I was sick and tired of us not moving."

Allen and other council members argued parents in the city to contact the council about other problem areas.

Perceptions that the council had focused on the Falls-Madrona intersection because a number of council members live near there were incorrect, Allen said.

Lottery

$5.6 million each year for the next 20 years after federal taxes.

Those were the statistics people buying tickets Tuesday in Twin Falls preferred to focus on.

At the Albertson's supermarket at 1221 Addison Ave. E., 263 people had bought $845 in tickets by 3:50 p.m. on Tuesday, said Kurt Stevens, who was helping man the green Idaho

Lottery terminals.

"I don't think we're half done," Stevens said. "I'm sure it'll pick up."

Stevens said that no one had bought tickets in bulk quantities. But last week, he recalled, 25 people pooled together $50 each and bought 1,250 tickets for last Saturday's drawing.

Travis Rutherford, a clerk at the Circle K store at 515 Washington St. N., said his Idaho Lottery machine had been spitting out tickets steadily since 7 a.m. Tuesday.

"We're selling them pretty big today, and it'll be even bigger tomorrow," he said. "I imagine every second or third customer has bought tickets. If it's not hot tomorrow night ..."

"I'm not working Saturday," Rutherford's co-worker finished for him.

Mayor

happening in the breeze for very long. "Dan was just the firebreathing yuck. The current council works well as a team and is predictable and consistent."

Coles said Tuesday the council has the option of selecting a mayor from among its ranks or by looking outside.

"I think that the mayor should be replaced from within," said Coles. "The mayor should be someone who was put in office by a popular vote."

and the job should be filled by someone who has some experience in city government, he said. Coles is the only current council member that fills all of those qualifications.

"They've (other council members) asked me if I'd be willing to serve," said Coles. "I've told them that I would."

Hamilton's departure means that all council seats and the mayorship are up for election this November. Hamilton left with two remaining years in his term. Elections will also be held to fill two two-year council posts and two four-year council positions.

Utility lowers proposed rate increase

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY - A proposed rate increase by the Bonneville Power Administration will mean higher electricity costs for consumers.

The good news is that the BPA, a federal agency that generates and distributes electricity in Idaho and other western states, scaled back its original increase proposal from 24 percent to 15.7 percent.

If the suggested increase becomes reality, officials say cities and electric companies will pass at least part of the additional cost on to their customers.

"We will need to increase our rates," said Dan Hill, Burley's Electrical Superintendent. It is too early to tell exactly how much the increase customers can expect, Hill said.

Larry Burbank, general manager of Rural Electric Company, said his firm will increase rates as well. He is looking for additional reports from the BPA stating what the exact rates will be during the summer and winter months.

The BPA's electrical rates vary as demand for electricity changes with the seasons.

The demand also fluctuates in different areas of the state, depending on whether the area is predominantly rural or residential, Burbank said.

Rural areas see a higher electricity demand in the summer because of the extra power needed to operate irrigation pumps. Residential demand peaks in the winter because of heating.

Since the latest increase proposal is less than the BPA's original 24 percent plan, Hill said the announcement can be seen as good or bad.

Any increase is undesirable, Hill said, even if it is smaller than originally feared.

Preliminary indications are that Burley won't have to raise its rates as high as the 15.7 percent, but Hill said it is hard to tell.

BPA officials say deep cuts totaling $286 million in recent weeks have reduced the size of the proposed increase for preferred customers - public utility districts, municipalities and cooperatives.

Cuts included closing district offices and moving toward closing two nuclear power plants.

Both Hill and Burbank said they will decide their individual rate increases by Oct. 1, the date the BPA rate increase is expected to kick in.

The BPA adjusts its rates every few years, but this increase is much higher than normal, Burbank said.

BPA Administrator Randy Hardy said the agency hopes the next increase will be smaller.

Our goal is to keep any increase in 1996 at a single digit, he said.

More than one-third of the rate increase can be blamed on the region's six-year drought, presumably a one-time event, Hardy said.

Although Idaho enjoyed a wet winter and spring, water totals in other areas were down.

The drought accounts for six or seven percentage points of the 15.7 percent increase. Fish and wildlife obligations account for four percentage points, and need to acquire new resources adds three percentage points, and aluminum prices pushed the proposed increase up two percentage points.

250 gallons of gas reported stolen

RUPERT - The recent theft of 250 gallons of gasoline from several railroad cars is the latest in a series of fuel thefts from trains parked in Rupert.

Richard Cotton of Matt Produce in Rupert told police Thursday that 250 gallons of gasoline had been taken from the railroad cars parked nearby.

"The fuel was taken sometime between June 29 and July 1, Cotton told the Minidoka County Sheriff's Department.

Cotton also said Union Pacific Railroad officials told him they have lost 1,300 gallons in the past, deputies said.

Deputies said they think a pump and siphon were used to transfer the gas from the train cars to a tractor-trailer.

The value of the stolen gasoline is estimated at $290.

Man claims assailants struck him

RUPERT - A Rupert man told police he was struck in the face by two men outside a bar Friday night.

Graciano Valdez, 25, said he was leaving a bar in Rupert Square around 11:30 p.m. when he was hit in the left eye twice after two men came up behind him, according to the Rupert Police Department.

Valdez told police one of the men had a pistol.

The only description he could provide was that the men were Hispanic, police said.

Valdez was treated and released at Minidoka Memorial Hospital.

Tools stolen from unfinished home

OAKLEY - Burglars took several tools last week from inside a home being built near Oakley.

An air compressor, drill and carpenter's level worth a total of $450 were taken Thursday from Keith Critchfield's home at 350 North and 100 East, according to the Cassia County Sheriff's Department.

Pancake House window broken

RUPERT - Someone threw a rock through the window of a Rupert restaurant Sunday night.

Mike Brown, owner of the Pancake House on 5th and Scott streets, discovered the broken window about 6:30 a.m. Monday, according to the Rupert Police Department.

Police said the window was worth $200.

Man charged with DUI after wreck

BURLEY - A driver who crashed into a light pole in Burley late Friday night has been charged with drunken driving, the sheriff's deputies said.

Jimmy D. Kendall, 30, of Burley was driving south on Parke Avenue when he entered the parking lot at Cassia Memorial Hospital and struck a light pole, according to the Cassia County Sheriff's Department.

Deputies reported $2,000 damage to Kendall's car. The light pole was undamaged. Kendall was treated at the hospital.

Claim lost purses, wallets

RUPERT - The Rupert Police Department has several purses and a wallet that were turned in over the Fourth of July weekend.

Anyone wanting to claim a lost purse or wallet should go to the law enforcement center in Rupert or call 436-9651.

Dishwasher missing from shed

BURLEY - A new dishwasher and camping equipment have been stolen from a Burley storage shed.

The shed, located at 2800 Overland Ave., was reportedly broken into during the last month, according to the Cassia County Sheriff's Department.

In addition to the dishwasher, worth $500, the burglar took a sleeping bag and a cooler, owner Steven Lake told deputies.

Deputies said there was no sign of forced entry. Lake said the shed had been locked.

Rupert Council approves 6-step police salary scale

By John J. Harberth
Mini-Cassia News Service

RUPERT - After weeks of discussion, the City Council adopted a new police pay scale Tuesday night.

The six-step salary schedule is similar to ones used by other departments in the city.

Previously, the police department had a 12-step scale. Most of the officers were at the top of their brackets, leaving no room for advancement.

Under the new plan, step increases will be determined by performance ratings and subject to approval by the mayor and council.

Mayor Bill Whitman said the new pay scale "changed no one's salary." He said a meritorious service pay increase for some officers will be considered by the council at a later date.

Councilman Dwainell Alfred expressed his thanks to Whitman and Chief of Police Richard Hooker for all their work on the plan.

Whitman also took time to thank the police department for their work during the Fourth of July festivities in keeping incidents to a minimum.

He said people are beginning to get the message that we aren't going to tolerate trouble.

"This is the best, least-trouble fourth that I can ever remember," said Whitman.

In other council business, the second reading of Ordinance 717 was held. The measure amends the city code and makes it unlawful to request or demand an electrical power connection without displaying a valid building permit.

Violation would be a misdemeanor. Whitman updated the council on the city's squirrel relocation program. Under the program, problem squirrels are trapped and relocated if a property owner requests it. No squirrels are killed.

So far, 46 people have contacted the city and requested that the squirrels be left alone. Sixteen people have reported incidents, mostly squirrels damaging fruit trees, and two or three have requested the animals be relocated.

He said people from all over have offered to take in the squirrels.

Burley Council awards bid for City Hall demolition

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY - The old City Hall could be razed by the middle of next month. The City Council awarded the bid for the building's demolition at Tuesday's meeting.

C&C Salvage from Boise submitted the winning bid of $45,705. Mayor, Frank Bauman said that the Environmental Protection Agency has the opportunity to review demolition plans.

If everything goes according to plan, however, Bauman said C&C could begin demolition of the structure on July 27. The building, that was constructed in 1917, could be demolished within two weeks.

Asbestos has already been removed from the structure. Bauman said after the meeting that it appears that most people know that the building needs to come down, but that they want a large pine tree standing north of the building to remain.

Bauman said the tree won't be disturbed.

The agreement calls for the building to be in "as is" condition, and Bauman said if residents desire anything such as a light fixture or bricks in the building, they will need to work through the salvage company.

The building has already been stripped of items that the city has deemed useful, Bauman said.

Lewis may run in 100-meter dash at Olympic Festival

SAN ANTONIO World record-holder Carl Lewis is a possible entrant in the men's 100-meter dash at the U.S. Olympic Festival, officials said Tuesday.

The U.S. Olympic Committee is awaiting final word from Lewis' Santa Monica Track Club and is holding a spot for the two-time Olympic 100-meter champion, according to Gayle Plant, a USOC sports scientist.

Numbers from Wimbledon coverage down from 1992

NEW YORK NBC's coverage of the Wimbledon men's singles final between Pete Sampras and Jim Courier on Sunday drew a Nielsen overnight rating of 5.3, off from last year's final coverage.

NBC received a 6.9 overnight figure for Andre Agassi's first Wimbledon title in 1992. However, NBC said last year's Sunday show also included portions of John McEnroe's doubles victory and ran an hour long.

Schrader, Hendrick avoid NASCAR suspensions

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. NASCAR driver Ken Schrader and car owner Fred Hendrick avoided suspension after all.

A three-member panel filed their four-race suspensions Tuesday, deciding instead to fine Schrader and Hendrick $5,000 each.

The suspensions, for using an illegal carburetor during qualifying for the Pepsi 400, were scheduled to start Sunday. But a National Stock Car Racing Commission panel reversed the ruling after listening to arguments from Winston Cup director Gary Nelson, Schrader and other team representatives.

Barnett tells Eagles he'll be free agent after 1994 season

PHILADELPHIA Philadelphia receiver Fred Barnett reportedly told the Eagles that he will only sign a one-year contract and plans to become a free agent in 1994.

The Philadelphia Inquirer reported today that Barnett, who makes about one-third the average salary of NFL starting receivers, is upset by the team's refusal to renegotiate his contract last year.

"The guy that outplayed his contract last year," agent Kyle Ryle Jr. said. "He feels it's time to get respect."

The 27-year-old Barnett, selected in the third round of the 1990 draft out of Arkansas State, had 67 receptions for 1,083 yards and six touchdowns last season when he made $195,000 in base salary and $389,000 with incentives.

Burley's course challenges amateurs

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

BURLEY Like any state amateur, there are a lot of golfers in the championship flight but only a few who can actually win the title.

If that is true, then the golfer best able to hit iron shots where he wants them and make putts over treacherous lines will win the 1993 championship, which goes up for grabs Friday morning at Burley Municipal Golf Course.

"The state association (IGA) wants the pattern of six hard, six easy and six medium pin placements each day," says host professional Earl Simpson.

"Now, we can find six tough pin placements every day, placements that will make second shots to the green and the ability to recover the key to the tournament. The player who does that best will win it," the pro said.

Burley isn't particularly long, basically straight-away, and long tee shots aren't paramount. The reasons is simple.

"These are narrow greens and anything hit on the sides, with the rough up a little is going to make getting up and down for pars very difficult," Simpson said.

On the matter of rough, Simpson said the field benefitted a little from the weather.

"The IGA said to let it roughen grow and we have for two weeks. But the weather hasn't been conducive to a lot of growth. It isn't nearly as rough as it would have been if the weather had been warmer," Simpson said.

"We've also ordered four days of no wind," he added with a smile.

If local knowledge is necessary to win here, Terry Spackman of Burley would be the favorite. Him or Glenn Blakey who won this title in 1981 all years ago but has won four state senior titles.

"That's one of the problems with playing on your home course," said Spackman with a smile. "People expect things you might not be able to deliver."

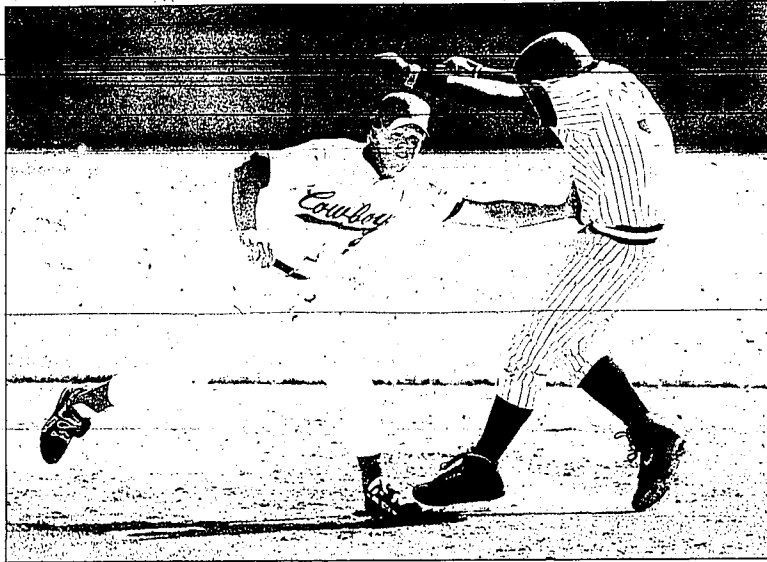

The championship flight is 52 strong and includes several former titles.

Back to defend the crown he won at Sand Creek is Pocatello's Steve Hays, Burley Mummy is pretty well suited to Hays' game.

The big gun out of the past is Payette's Scott Mastigelli, who has won this five times. Dave Molitor, Pocatello, will make another rare appearance on the course. He plays little but is talented enough to contend without a lot of preparation.

Blakeley and Twin Falls' Jason Meyerhoefer are two Magic Valley men seeking to repeat former triumphs. Jackson's Lynn Reiersgaard is looking for his first one. Preston Hafer, a junior-to-be at Kimberly High School this fall.

Taipei's luck holds out as it beats Calgary in tie-breaker

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS The luck of the Chinese Taipei baseball team wasn't all bad in Tuesday's final day of the Cowboy Classic at Frontier Field.

No breaks went the Taipei way during its 3-2 afternoon loss to Hillcrest, dropping the Chinese to 5-1 on the tournament. Taipei's luck came in the form of the championship tiebreaker — head-to-head competition. Calgary, also 5-1 at the Classic, lost to Taipei 9-2 Saturday in both teams' first game of the event.

Interest 3, Chinese Taipei 2

Twice in the late innings, Taipei failed to advance runners. Several times in the game Taipei batters smashed drives right at Hillcrest infielders.

But nothing worked to get Taipei back into the game.

Meanwhile, burly Hillcrest right-hander John Grigale held the Chinese to one hit and one walk over the last four innings to get a complete game victory. He struck out six, walked four and gave up five hits for the game.

Janice Hopkins' pop up single into center field with two out in the fifth inning scored the game winning run.

For Taipei, a lead-off walk in the sixth was scratched when Huskies catcher Greg Larson made a perfect throw to second to thwart a steal attempt by pinch runner Chen Kuang-lan.

Chen Hsin-Cheng led off the seventh with a double down the right field line. He stayed at second when Hsu Tzu-Wei's two-strike bunt dribbled in front of the plate, bounced against the front edge of the infield grass and rolled back foul for a Strikeout.

Darling 7-11 6, Cowboys 4

For most of the game, both teams acted like there was something they'd rather be doing than playing baseball, and it showed in the 10 errors they accumulated.

Darling 7-11 of Las Vegas broke a 4-4 tie in the top of the seventh when center fielder Tom King blooped a single onto the infield dirt just over a drawn in infield. The hit, coming with one out and the bases loaded, scored one run with another crossing when the rightfielder failed to pick up the ball on the fly.

Twin Falls tied the game in the sixth on Scott Dabney's second single of the contest. Mike Hodge's triple to right and Las Vegas' second throwing error of the game after a runner had been picked off first.

The Cowboys scored its first run in the third on a single and stolen base by Stan Summerfield and John McClusky's base hit.

Twin Falls added a tally in the fourth on Dabney's hit, steal of second and the two throwing errors that went along with the theft.

Darling 7-11 left-hander Mark Parantala got the win, holding Twin Falls to one earned run, five hits, three walks and getting four strikeouts, three in the second inning.

An eight-run third inning put together with eight hits and a walk put Lethbridge in the lead. Ryan Gunter and Inoy Hansen each doubled during the inning. Catcher Jared Lowing chipped in two singles.

Patriots make No. 1 pick a wealthy rookie

The Associated Press

BOSTON Drew Bledsoe, wearing a newly purchased tie and faded jeans, went from college kid to perhaps the richest rookie in NFL history Tuesday when he signed a six-year contract with the New England Patriots.

The top pick in the NFL draft, the quarterback who the Patriots hope will lead them from raggedness to respectability, said he never worried about missing the start of training camp July 15.

"I'm here to play football. I'm not here for any other reason," Bledsoe said. "For me to do that, they (the Patriots) knew as well as I did that I needed to be in training camp from Day One."

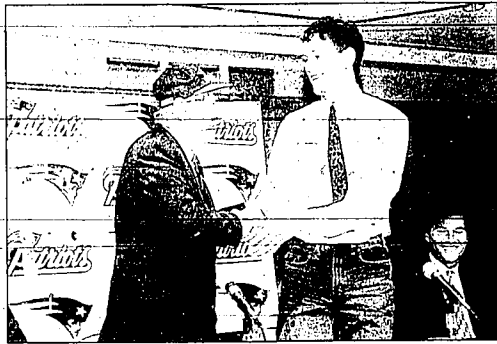

Bledsoe, who left Washington State after his junior season, signed for $500,000 less than Indianapolis quarterback Jeff George, the top pick in 1990, received in his $15 million, six-year deal, said Leigh Steinberg, agent for both players.

Steinberg also said Bledsoe's contract averages out to $2.48 million per year, which would put its total value at $14.88 million.

He said Bledsoe's deal "is the heaviest commitment that a team has ever made" to a draft pick because, unlike George's contract, none of the money is deferred. Last year's top choice, defensive lineman Steve Ertman, signed a 4-year, $9.165 million contract with Indianapolis.

Bledsoe reportedly received a $4.5 million signing bonus. While agreeing to a long-term deal, Bledsoe also won the right to renegotiate the last three years.

He could do that if he starts 10 games in the third season, participates in 55 percent of the plays in 10 games that year or gets a certain amount of total playing time in the first three years, Steinberg said.

Patriots owner James Orthwein, left, welcomes quarterback Drew Bledsoe to the NFL after the No. 1 draft pick signed a six-year contract.

But Bledsoe, who left a cross-country trip with some college buddies in Sioux Falls, S.D., to attend Tuesday's news conference, hoped to avoid being changed by his wealth.

"Money doesn't mean status," he said. "He planned to fly back Tuesday evening to Chicago to rejoin friends who were helping him drive his Chevrolet Suburban from the home in Washington state to Boston."

Bledsoe is just the fourth first-round pick to sign from this year's draft and the first of the top six choices.

He already has attended Patriot camps with other rookies and said he hopes to make the switch to the pros as soon as possible. Coach Bill Parcells has stressed he will not rush Bledsoe into action.

Hugh Millen, the Patriots starting quarterback in 1991, was injured for much of 1992 and started seven games. Tommy Hodson, Scott Zolak and Jeff Carlson also started at that position last year.

New England's 2-14 record tied Seattle for the worst mark in the NFL. After the Patriots drafted Bledsoe, they traded Millen to Dallas.

Bledsoe said his signing "is obviously right up there with the draft one of the happiest days of my life. I appreciate the entire commitment this team has made to becoming a winning franchise."

Commissioner says NFL's star not starting to dim

NEW YORK (AP) — NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue dismissed suggestions Tuesday that the NFL is becoming more popular than the NFL among American sports fans.

"Far more people watch pro football than watch professional basketball," the commissioner said in a conference call with U.S. and European reporters. "They've got about 25 percent of our audience."

The NBA's regular season ratings on NBC, its lone non-cable outlet, were 4.9. For NFL games, NBC had an 11.2, CBS a 13.2 and ABC a 16.8.

"That is not to diminish the progress of the NBA, Tagliabue said."

"David Stern has done an outstanding job to keep the game very exciting, beyond Charles Barkley and Michael Jordan," he said. "It's more attractive than ever. As an old player, the pace of the game and the competition of the league is so strong."

Having said that, Tagliabue went back on the attack.

"It's not near developing the national audience (ex-NFL commissioner) Pete Rozelle developed and we have continued the last four seasons," he said.

Henderson, A's both on hot streak

Rickey Henderson has been on a tear lately, and the Oakland Athletics have followed suit by winning 11 of their last 15 contests. Henderson has 22 hits in his last 49 at-bats.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — While the Oakland Athletics slogged through the early part of the season, free-agent-to-be Rickey Henderson was quietly doing his job as baseball's best leadoff man.

And as the A's have caught fire in the past two weeks, winning 11 of their last 15, so has Henderson. He is 22 for his last 49 at-bats (.449) and is hitting .316 for the season.

But it was a freak historical happening that put the spotlight on him. On Monday, he led off both games of a doubleheader with home runs, something that hadn't been done since 1913, when Boston's Harry Hooper did it.

"You start writing up a list of things Rickey has done, and he's legendary," gushed A's manager Tony La Russa. "This just adds to the legend."

Henderson's job, which he does perhaps better than anyone in history, is to get on base, then steal. Lately, though, he's been hitting homers — three in his last three games. One reason is that his walks are up — 25 in his last 22 games.

The way La Russa sees it, opposing pitchers can either put Henderson on base and risk him stealing his way around or pitch to him and risk giving up a homer.

Henderson already owns the major-league record for stolen bases and the career record for leadoff homers. His next big goal: making a run for big numbers in hopes of getting big bucks on the free-agent market.

"I always think that if I'm healthy through a whole season, I can put up numbers like I did in 1990. I did it in '85 and '86 with the Yankees," said Henderson in the last year of a four-year, $12 million deal. "I'm just happy to be healthy."

In spring training, though, he was anything but happy. He created a stir when he announced he wanted to be traded if contract negotiations didn't start soon.

When Oakland general manager Sandy Alderson, who generally doesn't talk contracts until after the season, said there was no club willing to take him, the furor died down, and Henderson went about his business.

Since then, the A's and Henderson's agent have talked, but there's no guarantee Henderson will be back with the A's.

In the meantime, he keeps hustling. His average dipped to .280 on June 11 but since then, it's been straight up.

"My play's been steady, but in keeping the club together, I think, everybody's putting in their piece," he said. "I don't think just because I'm having success right now that it's keeping the club (together)."

Nike defends flying player to all-star game

Newport News Daily Press

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. — Courtesy of a basketball shoe manufacturer, Allen Iverson's trial in Hampton, Va., on Friday will not prevent him from competing in an all-star game Saturday in Indianapolis.

Iverson, a rising senior at Bethel High School, was one of 120 athletes selected for the Nike All-American Basketball Festival, which runs Tuesday-Saturday in Indianapolis. But on Friday, Iverson, considered by many the nation's best prep player, is scheduled to be tried in Hampton Circuit Court on three felony charges of malicious wounding by mob. The charges stem from a Feb. 14 chair-throwing brawl in a bowling alley.

To solve the conflict, Nike, the shoe company endorsed by Michael Jordan and Charles Barkley, has agreed to fly Iverson home from Indianapolis on Thursday night and back to Indianapolis for Saturday's Festival all-star game.

The all-star game will be televised, on tape, by ESPN on Aug. 2. Nike provides commercial round-

'You wouldn't do this for a normal kid, but we're not talking about a normal kid. I don't think a kid getting into trouble for the first time should be penalized.'

—Bop Williams, Allen Iverson's coach trip airfare for all Festival participants, and Iverson and Bethel teammate Tony Rutland are scheduled to fly to Indianapolis on Monday. Nike spokesman Dusty Kidd said he did not know how much the extra round-trip ticket will cost the company.

But according to Kidd, Nike officials believed Iverson was in court only to give a deposition. Informed otherwise, Kidd said Nike still will fly Iverson home.

"That's just not right," said one college basketball coach who is contracted to outfit his team in Nike shoes.

Bop Williams, Iverson's summer league coach, defended Nike, which sponsors Williams' team.

"Nike operates a business, and this is a business decision," Williams said. "You wouldn't do this for a normal kid, but we're not talking about a normal kid. I don't think a kid getting into trouble for the first time should be penalized."

Iverson, 17, is one of two juveniles charged in connection with the brawl. But Hampton Juvenile Court Judge Louis R. Lerner ruled that both will be tried as adults. Two adults also were charged. Malicious wounding by mob is punishable by five to 20 years in prison.

Colleen Kilheia, Iverson's assistant community-school's attorney, said she hopes to postpone Iverson's trial until July 16, so as to try all four defendants simultaneously.

But Iverson's attorneys have yet to agree, Kilheia said.

Belgian keeps lead in Tour

DINARD, France (AP) — Belgium's Wilfried Nelissen maintained the overall lead Friday in the Tour de France.

Nelissen, the first Belgian to lead the Tour de France since 1985, barely lost Tuesday's 118-mile third stage, finishing second to Djambolite Abdoujaparov of Uzbekistan. Tuesday's stage went across Brittany from Vannes to Dinard.

Abdoujaparov, 29, won two stages on the tour in 1991. But he ended the race that year with a spectacular last-day fall on the Champs-Élysées in Paris, and had not won a stage since.

"That fall remains a very bad memory," he said. "But today, I went out there in ideal conditions, and I proved I know how to control my bike."

Italian Mario Cipollini, who won the first stage on Sunday, finished third for the day, and moved into second place overall, 25 seconds behind Nelissen. Abdoujaparov jumped into third, 28 seconds back.

Spain's Miguel Indurain, a heavy favorite to win his third straight title, finished 20th and dropped to fourth in the overall standings, 29 seconds behind. He trailed by 17 seconds after Monday's stage, but Nelissen extended his lead with bonus points for intermediate sprints.

The top American is Lance Armstrong, who was 37th Tuesday and is 52nd overall.

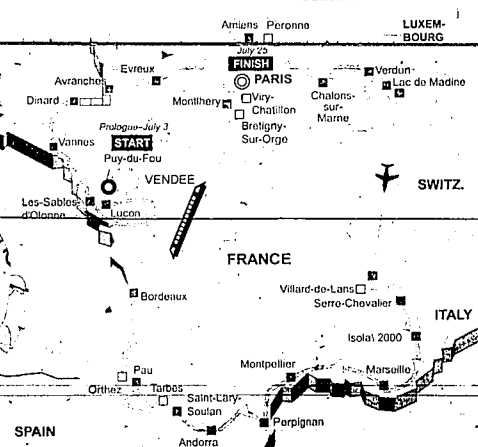

The main pack of riders was able to catch up with Laurent Desbiers of France and Marc Sergeant of Belgium, who broke away early and at one point had a 13-minute lead over the rest of the field.

O'Neal, others make film debut

FRANKFORT, Ind. (AP) — Shaquille O'Neal led a celluloid "Dream Team" into this tiny, over-stuffed town Tuesday, where thousands squeezed in to see Hollywood meet the hardwood.

O'Neal and recent NBA first-round draft pick Anfernee Hardaway, Calbert Cheaney, Bobby Hurley and Greg Graham are among the players on hand to film scenes for Nick Nolte's upcoming movie "Blue Chips."

"He is quite a sight," Frankfort mayor Harold Woodruff said of O'Neal, the 7-foot, 300-pound NBA rookie of the year. "And there's some other good-sized men out there, too."

Also scheduled to play in the four-game filming from Thursday through Monday are Matt Nover and Chris Reynolds, teammates of Cheaney's and Graham's at Indiana University.

WORKING FOR AMERICA.

A pilot with the skill to land a jet on a rolling deck. A computer specialist who can fix a complex navigational system while hundreds of miles at sea. A cook who can prepare a delicious meal for 500 hungry sailors. These people aren't just good, they're the best. And it means more to them because they're doing it for their country. They're Navy people, working hard for America. And that makes us proud.

Los Angeles pitcher Jim Gott met Glen Greenberg, 9, two years ago when Glen was undergoing chemotherapy, and a friendship soon developed between the two pitchers.

Dodgers hurler a hit with Little Leaguer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Glen Greenberg and Jim Gott are both pitchers, so naturally they spend time talking baseball. But the 9-year-old Little Leaguer, who is trying to beat leukemia, has helped the relief pitcher for the Los Angeles Dodgers realize that baseball is just a game.

"Glen has given me much more than I could ever give him," Gott says of the pitcher for the Mustang Rockies in Agoura Hills.

"It seems very simple, but it's just an appreciation of things — just an understanding that your family is much more important than baseball or making money or being the very best."

When they met through a friend of the Gott family almost two years ago, Glen was undergoing chemotherapy at Harbor-UCLA Medical Center.

Gott describes meeting a boy who had lost his hair and was very thin, but smiled and looked up with hopeful blue eyes. Glen has been attending Dodgers games since he was 3 months old.

"I was excited," Glen recalls. "My mom just said somebody was coming that played for the Dodgers, but I really didn't know who it was, so it was like a surprise."

At the time they first met, Gott's 5-year-old son was undergoing tests to determine why the boy is developmentally delayed.

"When we got a chance to go

"Here are these words of wisdom coming from a pint-sized person," Glen's mother says.

Dennis Byrd back in NFL as football analyst for CBS

NEW YORK (AP) — Dennis Byrd, whose football career ended abruptly last season when he broke his neck, has taken the first step toward what might be a new career, signing as an analyst with CBS Sports.

The network made the announcement Tuesday, saying the former New York Jets defensive lineman would work six games in the upcoming NFL season.

He came off the field last Nov. 29 paralyzed from the neck down. Miraculously, he took his first, halting steps on crutches 1½ months later. And now, this big step.

"I think there is hope that this will be the start of a whole new adventure for him," CBS Sports senior vice president Rick Gentile said. "I sense that he is very, very excited about it, as are we."

Byrd, working long hours to finish a book that is nearing deadline and still in intensive rehabilitation, was not available to comment immediately, but Gentile said he would have Byrd in New York in August to meet the press and his new co-workers.

Byrd

Gentile said. "Gentile said it was doubtful Byrd would make any of his early TV appearances in New York, where he played for three seasons."

"I think he's moving cautiously, and that's wise," Gentile said. "I think we'll try to bring him along slowly and work at a pace he's comfortable with. We've got some pretty experienced producers and play-by-play guys to help him out."

"But I don't think we'll bring him to New York right away. That wouldn't be fair to him. I think our schedule will accommodate bringing him along without a tremendous amount of exposure early, but we'll also bring him into the studio a couple of times."

Monterey beckons explorers

After two trips this year to the Monterey (California) peninsula, I've fallen in love — three times!

My first love is the area. Even though I'd been there several times years ago, this time I had time to explore those special places that make me yearn to go back: the miles of beaches with backing critters, the docks with the biggest sea gulls, the crashing of the surf, the deer browsing on the golf courses, the shady streets of Carmel with each house and yard a unique secret, the aquarium at Monterey where the wonders of the deep are as near as I'll ever see them, the Salinas Valley where most of our salads originate, Big Sur with its cliff views of the Pacific ...

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

I was enchanted; and I still have a list of places to explore next time.

My other loves are with two gentlemen that I've had crushes on since goodness knows when. The first is Clint Eastwood. Picture this California scenario: Enter the condo builders, bent on demolishing anything to build condos that only the rich can afford. They eye the old mission ranch in Carmel. It had fallen into disuse and was tacky. Who would miss such a place? Enter the guy with the white hat. He had fond memories of this place and hated to see it go the way of so many other antiques. So he fought it and is restoring it to, and even beyond, its former glory.

There are "bunkhouses" (bed and breakfast-like) and a restaurant that not only serves good, reasonably priced food but has a breathtaking view. Just out of sight is a grade-winning ant, if you're eating lunch on the deck, you can hear the laughter. Clint has saved something special.

My other love was a renewal with that gentle writer John Steinbeck who was born in Monterey and who also put it firmly on the map with his book "Cannery Row." Most of his sites have been replaced with 1-star strip, espresso cafes and the usual tourist stuff. But if you go there during the time Steinbeck called the hour of the Pearl, you might get a glimpse of what it once was.

The Fishwife, a restaurant in Pacific Grove is not to be missed. (There's a public golf course just around the corner from Pebble Beach with inexpensive green fees and a wonderful view of the ocean.) I collected a few recipes.

CARIBBEAN COLE SLAW

- 1/2 head white cabbage, shredded
- 1/2 medium onion, diced
- 1/2 green pepper, diced
- 1/2 red pepper, diced
- 4 serrano or jalapeno chilies, finely chopped

1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon black pepper
1 cup white vinegar
1/2 tablespoon sugar

In a large bowl combine the cabbage, onion, red and green peppers and chilies, with the salt and black pepper. Stir in the vinegar and sugar. Pack the slaw in a container with a firm fitting lid and let it sit for at least 8 hours before serving. This allows the cabbage to pickle.

This will keep for up to a week under refrigeration.

The next recipe was from a local Monterey gal. Try it on your grill, but make sure you preheat the grill and then let it get cooler. Remember, fish cooks fast, so slow it down as much as possible to hold in moisture.

GRILLED SALMON WITH SALSA

- 4 8-ounce salmon steaks
- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 2 tomatoes, chopped
- 1 clove garlic, chopped coarsely
- 1/2 cup cilantro, chopped
- Juice of 2 limes
- Hot pepper juice (like Tabasco) to taste

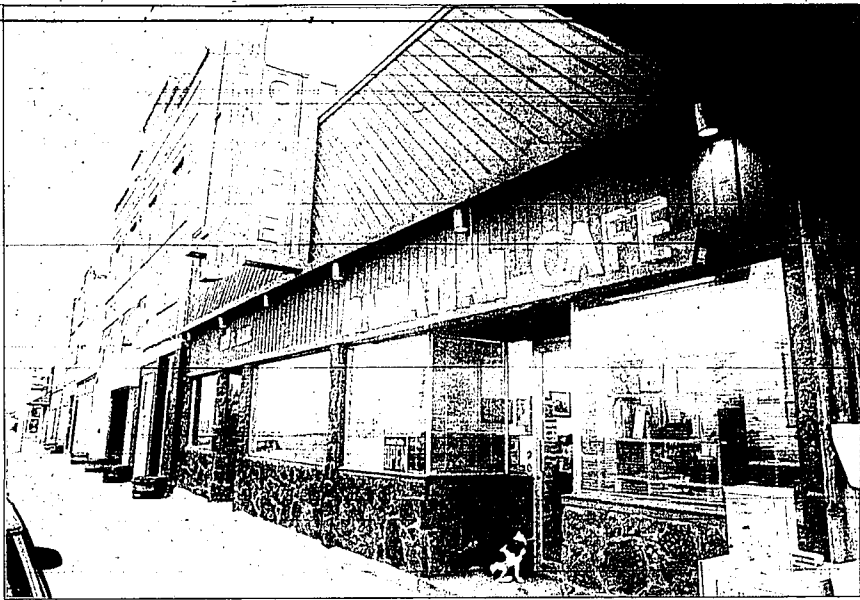

Salt and pepper

Rub the olive oil on the salmon and then sprinkle with salt and pepper. Grill over the low flame and turn only once. Remove when fish is opaque and/or flaky to a fork.

To make the salsa, combine all the ingredients.

This next recipe is in answer to a reader's request. She asked about Key Lime

Pull up a stool, there's nothing quite like a visit to ... Small-town cafes

By Steve Crump
Times News writer

"At noon, as the siren dies slowly at the end of its long scream, almost everyone in town puts down one thing and picks up another. Father Emil picks up his breviary and prays for the poor people: 'My God, rich people have the time to praise You if they want to, but the poor people are so busy, accept their work as praise because, my God, they don't have time for everyone.' A lot of poor people knock off work right then and have them some dinner, such as the Commercial Hot Beef Sandwich at the Chatterbox Cafe."

10 rules for dining out

- Never stop anywhere that says "outs" on the outside.
- Real chicken-friend steak is served with white gravy.
- Barbouco should be made with roast beef, not hamburger.
- Never dine at greasy spoon named after a woman. Odds are pretty good she cooks badly; chances are even better she cooks there.
- Lemon pie served with whipped-cream wasn't made on the premises.
- A hot hamburger sandwich is stuck between two pieces of bread and covered with brown gravy.
- You should never, ever have to ask for a coffee refill.
- Any place that serves scones has probably cleaned the deep-fryer sometime in the past six months.
- Waitresses do not enjoy being called "honey."
- A doughnut should not be a work of pastry; it should be a work of art.

the half-light outside. Price's Cafe, Clody Taylor would plow two eggs and two strips of bacon on the grill. Six mornings a week for more than a quarter-century.

"He used to tell me a fella couldn't change if he wanted to," says Taylor, the proprietor, wiping his hands on his apron.

Welcome to the small-town cafe, where the pie's fresh, the coffee's black and you'll keep it off the sports page if you know what's good for you.

By the time Taylor and his waitresses make it to work by 5 a.m., a handful of patrons is often already there.

"They get the cups down," he said. "Sometimes by the time the coffee's ready, they've been sitting there for a half hour."

Seventy miles away in Shoshone, business is brisk at the 103-year-old Manhattan Cafe, so some of the regulars pitch in and help.

"I guess they figure this place is the home of the town, why not clear the table?" says owner George Wyant.

"In this business," Taylor

Hot days, cool kids

When kids reach for sweets, hand them a nutritious treat

With long summer days, youngsters are hungry and thirsty, clamoring for something delicious to eat. Spending more time outdoors — hiking, roller-blading, swimming and playing with friends — kids build up voracious appetites.

The challenge for parents is to give children healthful summertime snacks that they'll like. But Mom, don't fret. Even though kids seem to reach for high-fat snacks low in nutrition, you can use a little creativity to make healthful snacks enticing to your child's taste buds. And nutrition experts say healthy snacks can and should be an important part of a child's overall balanced diet.

Encourage kids to grab for a better choice such as healthy fruit juice drinks to make simple, fun snacks that will please even picky eaters. Children love the color and the flavor of fruit juice drinks such as strawberry, raspberry, cherry, cranberry and orange.

By using these to make delicious, fun snacks and drinks like frothy fruit smoothies, colorful fruit ices and bubbly shakes, you can provide kids the flavor they are looking for, and you can feel good about providing treats which are low-fat and sources of Vitamin C.

Please see COOL/C7

Satisfy children's thirst for summertime snacks with, from top left, a Fizzler, Banana Blinger or an Awesome Fruit Ice.

Good manners are history with younger generation

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the mother whose children neglected to send some kind of expression of thanks and love on Mother's Day, I am wondering if there is a friend for young adults living away from their parents and grandparents to accept what their parents and grandparents do as a duty which requires no recognition.

My adult children have always expressed appreciation of my gifts to them, but my grandchildren (ages 17 and 11) have never acknowledged my gifts with a note, a phone call, or even in person on those rare occasions that I see them. The gifts are mostly cash - in the amount which I consider appropriately related to my income.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

I have never mentioned my hurt to my children. Should I? Where does the responsibility for this common courtesy rest? Their children have been old enough the past few years to initiate some response on their own.

Today, I received the first envelope addressed to me from my 17-year-old granddaughter. It's a high school graduation announcement! Now what?

—HER GRANDFATHER

IN SCOTSDALE: DEAR GRANDFATHER: Do not mention your hurt to your children. They may have taught their children better manners, but somehow it didn't take. (It happens.)

The next time you see your grandchildren, tell them that you do not need a written or verbal acknowledgment of your gifts - but they need to learn the importance of expressing their appreciation for having been remembered. If you can successfully drive that message home to them, you will have given them a gift more valuable (and lasting) than cash.

DEAR ABBY: I have an embarrassing problem. I have very sweaty palms. It is only when I am nervous, particularly in social situations. I do not sweat profusely from any other part, nor do I have an offensive body odor. This problem makes shaking hands with others in many situations a bit awkward. (It isn't a joke.)

I have attempted to calm myself down, but that is not the problem. I am not an overly nervous person. Besides constantly wiping my hands on my pants, have you any other suggestions?

—SWEATY PALMS

DEAR SWEATY PALMS: I rarely recommend a product, but to praise Drysol, I feel compelled to do so. It is manufactured by Persol-Covey Inc. in Glendale, Calif. 91201, and a doctor's prescription is required to obtain it.

DEAR ABBY: The letter in your column about the kids who wet their pants in school brought back this memory:

My son, Steven, went to nursery school with Elizabeth Taylor's son, Michael Wilding, when we all lived in Palm Springs during the winter. At the time, Elizabeth Taylor was married to Mike Todd. Mike took the boys to school and enjoyed sitting with them on one of those little chairs ... and he would tell them stories. Those children hung on every word and listened intently ... so when a puddle started to seep across the floor, Mike and the children got up and looked around for a "spilled orange juice," or whatever (Make's idea), He graciously ignored my son's wet bottom!

The driver who brought my son home told me this story to explain why Steven was brought home in a skirt!

Answers to your growing questions and concerns

The mailbox brings some interesting questions-as things get growing this season.

Q. Why doesn't my mockorange bloom? It seems healthy otherwise.

A. Wild mockorange is a first cousin of Idaho's state flower (the Syringa), so one would think it would do well here. Like other blooming shrubs, it likes to have only its old wood pruned out each year after bloom. Leaving plenty of old wood to carry on. A lack of bloom can sometimes be blamed on a fertilizer too high in nitrogen (which causes a lot of green leafy growth with no flowers).

Try a fertilizer that has a low nitrogen (the first number on the container) percentage. Apply it just after bloom.

Q. How and when do you prune potentilla? Ours is 'ton of hand.

A. Potentilla is a flowering shrub, too. They need to have their oldest stems cut out to encourage new growth. Trace the stem you want to remove back to its origin - all the way back to the base of the plant if you can't. Cut there. Do not leave stubs. Always cut at a junction where the stems branch off.

Like other flowering shrubs, potentilla will appreciate being cut back in late spring, after it has bloomed. When you prune branches all the way back to their origin, the size of the bush will naturally be shortened. Don't be tempted to give it a "haircut" with hedge shears.

Q. How do I remove the spent blooms from my roses?

A. This is called "deadheading." The rule of thumb has always been to go back down the cane to the first five-leaf cluster and cut there. But there is something else to consider before you do that.

Is this a big strong cane? The new growth that comes where you make your cut must be strong enough to support a new rose. The new cane will be smaller than the parent.

Green Thumbprints

If it appears that the new growth won't be thick enough to support a new rose, go further down the cane to where it is bigger around. Again, cut at a five-leaf cluster. If you cut at a three-leaf cluster you won't get another rose.

Q. My lawn is still green. Should I be watering now?

A. Water conservation should be on everyone's minds. We want to use our water wisely. If you have established trees and shrubs, they will probably do fine with regular lawn watering - a deep soaking once or twice a week.

But new ornamentals - those you planted last year or this spring still need a boost. The best thing you can do for them is install a drip system to each plant. The next best thing is to lay a "leaky hose" around the base and let it soak the tree or shrub slowly. If you can't do that, put the hose in each tree well, and let it run as slowly as you can until the tree well is full.

Move on to the next tree. When that well is full, the water in the first should have soaked in. Fill it up again. Do this once a week. Although it seems like it's been a wet spring, plants need at least an inch of water per week to survive, more to thrive. We had about an inch and 2/3 during the entire month of June.

Sydney Omarr Horoscope

IF JULY 7 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are spiritual, your own most severe critic, sensitive, psychic and you firmly believe in Nirvana and existence of soul mate. Current cycle highlights travel, universal aspects, romance on high level, ability to gain wider audience, including overseas. Last month, June, you made major domestic adjustment - it was right thing to do despite doubts that arise during this month. August will be your most profitable month of 1993.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Breakthrough is imminent. Focus on initiative, courage of convictions, willingness to take risks. Creative endeavors, romance, career figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): What held you back is removed. Major wishes due to be fulfilled - faster than originally anticipated. Focus on property, basic values, unique collections, marital status.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Promotion is imminent. Make inquiries, display versatility, humor. Express willingness to participate in public relations, advertising campaign. Individual in position of authority says, "You're it!"

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Spotlight on products, talent, ability to shake loose from superficial people who are shallow, not worthy. Soak your will in written material, creative endeavors, variety of experiences, contacts. Member of opposite sex confides, "You devastate me!"

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): What appeared to be missed opportunity boomerangs in your favor. Focus on written material, creative endeavors, variety of experiences, contacts. Member of opposite sex confides, "You devastate me!"

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Attention revolves around income potential, legal rights, partnership, marital status. Within two days, you'll be told, "You have won your case!"

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Define terms, heed inner voice. Individual who says, "I'll love you forever," might be on way to Tishia. Be missed opportunity relationship. Let go of situations, individuals who weigh you down, giving nothing in return.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Key is organization, responsibility, awareness of time limitations. Your life force receives benefit of greater light. Money that was lost returns almost as if by magic.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Utilize elements of timing, strategy. Accent the unexpected, accept challenge relating to publishing, advertising, poetry. Love will not be unrequited.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Meeting results in clandestine arrangement - you'll be in charge of entertainment, propaganda, funding. Appearance before the media would prove satisfying.

A mouthful on loneliness

L.M. Boyd
 What's what?

The writer Thomas Wolfe said, "The whole conviction of my life now rests upon the belief that loneliness, far from being a rare and curious phenomenon, peculiar to myself and to a few other solitary men, is the central and inevitable fact of human existence."

Q. Is it true Queen Elizabeth doesn't know how to make change?
 A. Hardly. But the report is she handles cash so rarely she's none too deft at it.

Q. How come pandas don't hibernate?
 A. They eat bamboo shoots. Can't store enough fat.

Q. Is there such a person as a "shy catlover"?
 A. Evidently. Some psychologists say certain individuals crave the company of others and enjoy that company immensely, even though they're a bit fearful and self-conscious in groups.

Q. Observed the writer Kathleen Norris: "In spite of the cost of living, it's still popular."
 A. They eat bamboo shoots. Can't store enough fat.

Food guide serves up facts about fat, menu options

By Colleen Pierre
The Baltimore Sun

Despite "get the fat out" campaigns, waged by a multitude of national health organizations, 11 find people still confused about fat, saturated fat, cholesterol and calories from fat.

Recently I came across a publication, "Skimming the Fat: A Practical Food Guide," written for the American Dietetic Association by Maureen Callahan, M.S., R.D. This 32-page guide is the most concise yet information-filled piece I've seen on the subject. It offers a chart on how much fat to eat and the fat content of a wide variety of foods.

Here are some tips:

- Take the focus off small meat portions by trying stir-fries. Very little oil or no oil and lots of vegetables keep the dish lean.

- Try the en papillote (paper packet) technique for fish or chicken. Use parchment paper or foil and place lean meat, herbs, vegetables and a splash of liquid like wine, in the center. Wrap and bake.
- Opt for the "select" grade in meat; it has less marbling (and so, much less fat) than choice cuts.
- Marinate lean cuts of meats with citrus juice, vinegar or other acidic liquids to help tenderize them before cooking. Add fresh herbs to flavor marinade.
- Substitute turkey breast or lean ham for luncheon meats like bologna, salami and liverwurst. Or, try low-fat turkey copycat versions of pastami and bologna.

- Let lean smoked ham or Canadian bacon take the place of bacon in recipes. Ham offers bacon's smoky flavor with less fat.
- Poof the skin off chicken after roasting or baking. As long as you remove the skin before eating, you'll cut back on fat.
- Broil meats for soups or stews, rather than browning them in oil.
- Oven-fry chicken and fish: dip in egg white, coat with seasoned bread crumbs and bake on a non-stick pan coated with vegetable spray.

The guide is available for $8.25 (including shipping and handling) send check payable to: American Dietetic Association, Dept. 810, P.O. Box 4729, Chicago, Ill. 60680-4729.

Diners

at guys lumbering in the front door, so there is dice clatter and loud yells of talk across the room and the crash of plates - she looks like she could clear the room in 11 seconds flat.

"You know, I think I'd sell this place for about half of what anyone in his right mind would want to pay for it," she says to nobody in particular.

"Shoot, even that damned Clinton had sense enough to take his hat off first."

"The Chatterbox is packed today because it rained so hard last night nobody could get into the fields this morning and a lot of them wound up in town. Big boys of pear-shaped gents in coveralls lined up on the stools like the 1928 Chicago Bears as seen by Bronko Nagurski."

other he had a good meal here," Taylor said. "That gets them here in the first place, but the food and service bring them back."

"But, yeah, a lot of the appeal in this place is atmosphere," he said. "People come here because they know their friends are going to be here. Or because the same waitress has been pouring coffee for them for 30 years."

"One of our waitresses just retired and the rest have been with us for six or seven years," Wyant says. "They keep us in business, along with our coffee, our hamburgers, our chicken-fried steak and the fact that if you want to know what's going on in Shoshone, you have to come here."

There are, between Hammett and Malta, dozens of diners, family cafes, greasy spoons, catering to farmers, shift workers in factories and the valley's estimated 20,000 senior citizens.

"It's not unusual for us to see the same people two or three times a day," Wyant said. "In a small town, this is like the newspaper. You come here to find out what's going on."

Over at Price's Cafe, they don't talk politics much anymore. Instead, they sit and watch and wait out a late June thunderstorm thrashing itself to exhaustion on Mount Rainier.

"Give farmers to a booth, cellular phones or radios on their belts. Sit in the wind and rhinomania in the air."

"Almost anyone in town who has normal hearing and eats a slow lunch at the Chatterbox is a better source of straight poop than the Herald-Star. If you order pie and take your time, Dele will take a swipe around the salt and pepper with a damp cloth and say, 'I heard that Miss Bonner might not be coming back to teach English,' and you say, 'Oh really? What's that all about?'"

"Well, I shouldn't be telling you, I suppose," she said, "but you'd hear about it eventually anyway, so ... and she talks about Miss Bonner's romance up north with a younger man, a violinist whom she had met at a roadside spa. She was seen with him in The Starline Club near Lake Winnebago, drinking a shoe gin fizz and looking into his eyes with a moony expression."

"I keep going back because I've got credit there," quips Roger Kelly, a regular who works in Shoshone. "If I had credit somewhere else, I'd go there."

Kelly, of course, is well aware that there's no place else in the town of 1,200 to go where you can hear news before it is news.

"Most of the fellas who come in here are friends; so it's very unusual for them to sit there, drink coffee and talk about how to help each other," Taylor said. "That's one of the pleasures of running a place like this."

Taylor represents the third generation of his family that has run Price's, which began life as a 15-room, three-story and-a-half-story hotel coterie in downtown Burley during the Depression.

"I've been working here for 29 years," he said. "Nobody who was in business when I started out is still around."

Price's, located in a one-story structure almost two miles from Interstate 84, is like most successful diners in that it appeals predominantly to locals and advertises by word of mouth.

"On a recent morning, the regulars gathered in knots of three or four, comparing Bill Clinton's $200 taxpayer-subsidized haircut to that of a farmer who sat there silently at the counter, stirring his coffee as his overexposed ears reddened to the color of the squeeze bottle of ketchup in front of him."

"I think most of our business comes from one person telling another."

And before you know it, you catch yourself saying, "I believe I'll have another piece of pie."

Pie. Well, there is a secret. The special ingredient is Key Lime juice or the limes to squeeze. As you have probably guessed, the limes come from the Florida Keys and, yes, they are different and make a different tasting pie than regular limes.

"Some people can't get the juice and sometimes your produce department can get the fresh in. You'll just have to beg. Also check some of the specialty, gourmet magazines. Sometimes they have places to send for local produce."

If you're lucky enough to get some of the Key Limes, here's a classic recipe for the pie. Note: this recipe calls for a graham cracker crust but I've eaten the pie with pastry crust. Your choice on that one.

6 tablespoons sugar
2 cup melted butter
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 can sweetened condensed milk (not evaporated)
4 egg yolks
2 Florida key limes, or juice to equal 1 cup
1 cup whipping cream

Combine the cracker crumbs with 3 of the tablespoons of the sugar, the butter and cinnamon. Mix well, press crust mixture into pie plate and bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 12 minutes. Remove crust from oven and allow to totally cool.

Prepare the filling by blending the condensed milk with the egg yolks.

Add the lime juice and pour the mixture into the pie shell and bake again at 350 degrees for 12 minutes. Whip the cream and the remaining 3 tablespoons of sugar together for the topping. Spread it over the top of the chilled pie. Refrigerate and serve chilled.

I hope you enjoying the summer, the few days we've had here and there.

Enjoy!

Light chicken recipe takes no time to prepare

Seattle Times

The following light eating recipe was developed by Cecé Sullivan, home economist on the staff of the Seattle Times.

PULLED CHICKEN WITH LEMON-TOMATO SAUCE

4 servings; approximate preparation time, 30 minutes.

1 pound plum tomatoes, cored

2 teaspoons olive oil

1 small carrot, peeled and finely diced

1 medium onion, peeled and finely diced

1 medium rib celery, finely diced

2 medium cloves garlic, peeled and minced

1 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes

Grated peel of 1 lemon

1/2 cup water

1/2 cup canned tomato puree

1/2 teaspoon salt

Freshly ground black pepper to taste

4 skinless chicken breast halves on the bone

5 tablespoons lemon juice

6 large sage leaves, shredded

8 large basil leaves, shredded

1/2 cup minced parsley

1. Bring a pan of water to the boil, add the tomatoes, and time 30 seconds to 1 minute, just until the skins start to crack. Drain and rinse with cold water briefly to stop the cooking. Peel, seed and chop coarsely.

2. In a large nonstick skillet heat the olive oil over medium heat. Add the carrot, onion, celery and garlic; sauté 10 minutes, stirring often. Stir in the tomatoes, red pepper flakes, lemon, water, tomato puree, salt and pepper. Bring to a boil, reduce the heat and simmer 10 minutes.

3. Add the chicken breasts, spooning some of the sauce over. Cover and cook 30 minutes, or until done. Baste often. Remove the chicken from the pan and cool slightly.

4. When cool enough to handle, "pull" the chicken into shreds and put back into the sauce. Stir in the lemon juice, sage, basil and parsley. Cook over medium-low heat 5 minutes. Serve over noodles or rice.

Quaker Oats seeks top-notch recipes

"Bake It Better With Oats" is the theme of the fourth annual Quaker Oatmeal Recipe Contest, and the oatmeal cookie, dessert, muffin or bread recipe that is judged best will win $10,000.

Recipes in the fourth annual Quaker Oatmeal Recipe Contest may be entered in one of three categories: Cookies, Desserts, and Breads-Muffins. To be considered eligible, the following criteria, several of which are new this year, must be met.

• Recipe must be original.

• Cookie recipes must use at least

2 cups Quaker oats (quick or old-fashioned, uncooked); recipes for desserts and breads-muffins must use at least 1 cup Quaker oats.

• Recipes must contain no more than 12 ingredients (excluding water).

• Recipes for yeast breads must be streamlined for convenience. Examples include but are not limited to: the use of quick-rising yeast, frozen bread dough or hot roll mix; microwave proofing; and butter breads.

• Each recipe must include a proof of purchase (cash register receipt or UPC code).

Finalist recipes will be kitchen-tested and judged by a panel of food professionals on the basis of taste, convenience, appearance and creativity. In addition to the $10,000 Grand Prize, three $2,000 first prizes (one per category), three $1,000 second prizes (one per category), and 25 Quaker cookie tins will be awarded.

Beginning July 1, send entries to: Quaker Oatmeal Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 548, Dept. B, Torrington, Ill. 60011. Entries must be postmarked by midnight Oct. 23 and received by Oct. 28.

THE WILD WEST

Imagine your child reliving the days of the old West in this Fort Apache playhouse. It even has a watch tower and secret sliding door. The 2" x 2" post and beam construction is designed to look like any kind of horse-play. The playhouse measures 4 x 4 x 4, not including the tower. The plan contains photos, drawing a materials list and cutting schedule. Traceable letters for the sign are also included.
